MATEWAN POLICE CHIEF SAID TO HAVE FIRED FIRST SHOT

Witness Testifies He Saw Sid Hatfield Shoot From Store, and That He Heard No Firing Previously.

WOMAN TELLS OF SEEING EVICTIONS

School Teacher Declares She Watched Detectives Put Miners Out of Company Houses.

By the Associated Press.

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., Feb. 15.—Sid Hatfield, chief of police of Matewan, fired the first shot in the fight between citizens and Baldwin-Felts detectives, at Matewan last May, in the opinion of Jeff Stafford, the first witness at the afternoon session today of the Circuit Court, where 19 men are being tried for complicity in the fight in which 10 persons were killed. Stafford supplemented his statement by saying he saw Hatfield fire from the door of the hardware store; that he had heard no firing before this and believed the chief was the first to shoot.

Stafford, who was employed as a clerk in the store, testified that several of the defendants were in the room, gathered around the front door. After the first shot he ran up the stairs to a second office, where he remained. Among the men in the room, he said, were Ben Mount and Hatfield, and a one-time defendant, Isaac Brewer.

Standing outside the door, Stafford continued, were Albert Felts and Cunningham, one of Felts' party. After the first shot he said that there was a confusing volley of shots.

Says He "Got Positive." Stafford was vigorously cross-examined, and under the close questioning said he was "not positive" that Hatfield had fired the first shot, but it appeared to him that as the police chief "leveled his pistol" he was aimed at Felts, who was standing directly in front of him.

Stafford was excused temporarily when Attorney Corniff, for the defense, brought out that the witness in a conversation with Harold W. Houston of counsel for the defense, recently told him that he did not know who fired the first shot.

Tells of Talk With Hatfield. Stafford testified that he had been one of the witnesses before the grand jury, which returned the indictments against the 19 men on Jan. 12. After the grand jury sitting, he said, he asked Hatfield if it would help Hatfield for him to go to another county. Hatfield said he thought it would, and offered to pay his fine. If he "got into trouble," Stafford said.

R. A. Salton, a Williamson physician, said he was the first witness called. He said he had examined the bodies of the seven Baldwin-Felts detectives killed in the fight, but he was questioned more particularly regarding the bullet wounds in the body of Albert C. Felts, leader of the detective force. The witness said, had been shot four times. Either of two of these wounds would have been fatal. Powder burns showed that one bullet had been fired from a rifle or pistol not more than 15 inches away.

Dr. C. B. Connelly, another physician who aided in the examination of the bodies, testified along the lines followed by Dr. Salton.

Tells of Search of Houses. Miss Gladys Carnes, a school teacher of Avondale, McDowell County, who was a member of the Matewan teaching staff, testified that she was on her way to school one day last May when she saw Baldwin-Felts detectives evicting miners and their families from houses of the Mountaineer Coal Co., not far from the school building where she taught.

These houses, she testified, were on the outskirts of the village. As she watched the proceedings, she said, she saw Sid Hatfield and a crowd of men walk up the railroad track from Matewan and approach the detectives. A few minutes later they were joined by Mayor Testerman. Hatfield and Testerman engaged Felts in conversation. Hatfield demanded to know, she said, by what right Felts was evicting the miners, to which Felts replied that he was discharging his "lawful duty."

Later in the day, Miss Carnes said, when school had been dismissed, she went to Union Camp, near Matewan, to see other evictions which she had heard were in progress there. On her way she was met by Baldwin-Felts detectives returning from Union Camp and later she said several miners started for Matewan from the same direction. Among them was Charles Kaiser, one of the defendants, whom Miss Carnes said, carried a rifle. Others of the miners were armed, she added.

Who's Who in Suffrage Causes New Dissension

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt Presents Another Angle to Dispute Over Busts of "Pioneers," Offered to Adorn Capitol.

By Leased Wire From The New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Dissensions over the busts of the suffrage pioneers, for which the National Woman's party asks permanent place in the Capitol at Washington, have broken out in a new place. The National American Woman Suffrage Association has taken a hand. The marble ladies, challenged from so many quarters for so many reasons, have had all but acquired the dignity of discredited ancestors when a statement by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, in the Women's Citizen, just out, brought the whole matter on the carpet again. The statement runs:

"My attention has been called to the circulation of a rumor purporting to come from the headquarters of the Woman's Party at Washington that an invitation had been extended to the National American Woman Suffrage Association to join in the ceremonies attending upon the presentation of certain busts to the Capitol and that no reply had ever been received."

"The facts are: The invitation, dated Jan. 3, was received at the national headquarters Jan. 5. On Jan. 6 the following letter was mailed:

"My Dear Miss Paul: This acknowledgment receipt of your favor of Jan. 3. I am calling a 'Woman's Citizen' to the National American Woman Suffrage Association for the 17th or 18th of January at which time the contents of your letter will be laid before it for consideration. You will be informed promptly thereafter as to the outcome."

After the meeting of the board, Mrs. Catt notified Miss Paul that the board had decided to postpone the busts to the party in power responsible for the busts. The National Woman's party went out into the West to help defeat some of its best friends purely because they belonged to the party in power. This we believe not only did not advance the passage of the Federal amendment, but held it back for some time."

Who's Who in Suffrage. "The National Woman Suffrage Association was not sympathetic to the picketing of the White House, and we held to the principle which we held to in the early days, but while Lucetta Mott reflected the spirit of suffrage, she did not fight in the ranks. Lucy Stone, the leader of one of the two earliest suffrage associations and an inspiration to her followers, is in our estimation the third pioneer."

"Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton were, of course, the foremost women in the fight for the vote in the early days, but while Lucetta Mott reflected the spirit of suffrage, she did not fight in the ranks. Lucy Stone, the leader of one of the two earliest suffrage associations and an inspiration to her followers, is in our estimation the third pioneer."

Health Commissioner Copeland said last night there were two other typhus cases in the city. A Mrs. Mary Barrett of Brooklyn, he said, was doing well. The other case is in the Willard Parker Hospital. There have been three deaths since 1892 from Brill's disease, a mild form of typhus, so-called because it was first classified by Dr. Brill of Mount Sinai Hospital.

Significantly, young Halligan had not come in contact with any immigrant or other person from Europe. This was stated in a report on his case made to the Health Department Saturday. Dr. Copeland said the youth had been around the docks in Brooklyn occasionally, and probably picked up disease-carrying vermin there.

YOUTH BECAME ILL JAN. 16. Halligan was taken ill Jan. 16, with headaches and fever. On Jan. 27 he was taken to St. Mary's Hospital. He then had a temperature of 104, a pulse of 140, and was delirious. His chest, neck and arms were covered with the rash peculiar to typhus, and he complained of severe pains in his back. The disease had made such inroads that the physicians were unable to save him.

When Dr. Copeland was notified of Halligan's death he sent several more telegrams to Washington, requesting Federal action in preventing vermin-laden immigrants from landing here.

Dr. Copeland telephoned to the Health Commissioner of Boston, where immigrants from several European ports had been landed in a few days, and told him that from 10 to 15 per cent of the immigrants landing here had vermin. The Boston official said he had received information that the Public Health Service would require 12 days to elapse from the time passengers were cleaned and taken on board ship in European ports before they would be permitted to land in this country. That is the time it takes for the disease to develop. If a liner came here from a disease-infested port in less than that time she would have to lie at anchor for the remainder of the 12-day period before being permitted to dock.

Passengers Not Examined. Dr. Copeland also said that 450 passengers had been landed from ships in Hoboken within three days and entrained there for various points, without being examined for vermin. He said he intended to establish such inspection stations at Grand Central Station and the Pennsylvania and stop immigrants from coming into the city who have landed at Boston, Philadelphia and other ports.

Meantime the health officer of the port sought a liner to be anchored in quarantine and on which passengers from typhus ports could be held. The International Mercantile Marine Co. turned over to him the big liner Minnesota, on which 1500 or 1600 tons will be placed.

In lesser degree, but no less truly, the magnitude of our task measures our responsibility and leaves us no middle ground between performance and failure. The program may be comprehensive; it may in some respects, be almost revolutionary in its provisions. There is no excuse for faltering for any reason. The man who would not try something new to uphold a lagging school system, to guarantee a fair election, to construct road systems, to consolidate and make responsible a system of government, is one who turns aside simply from the responsibility of the task. There is no reason for failure, there is no excuse for non-performance—the order of the day in Missouri is forward, and that man, or that party, which refuses the challenge will, and ought to, travel down the road of broken pledges to dishonor."

THREE DEATHS OF TYPHUS IN 24 HOURS IN NEW YORK

Brooklyn Youth, Said to Have Visited Docks Frequently, and Two Persons From Ships Succumb.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—One death from typhus—the third within the last 24 hours—was reported today to city health authorities now concentrating their efforts to prevent the spread of the disease brought to the United States by immigrants from Europe. The death occurred at Hoffman Island, where the patient had been taken from a ship. Thirty-five persons are under treatment.

James Halligan, 18 years old, of Brooklyn, died in St. Mary's Hospital yesterday. The Health Department said it was a case of real typhus, and the first death from it here since 1892. Flicke Franchese, one of the Italian women who arrived here on the liner San Giusto, suffering from typhus, and was taken from the ship to Hoffman Island, also died. The body was cremated.

SENATORS NOTIFY HOUSTON TO STOP PAYMENTS TO ALLIES

Committee Calls for Information on Negotiations by Foreign Countries for Credits.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Secretary Houston was notified formally today by the Senate Judiciary Committee that he "should pay out no more money on account of any commitments of loans to foreign countries until the facts have been submitted to this committee, and it has had an opportunity to consider the same and report to the Senate."

The committee's action was by unanimous vote, and was taken on motion of Sen. Reed, Democrat of Missouri, author of a pending resolution to stop all advances by the Treasury to the allied governments.

Decision to take immediate and direct action was made by the committee after Senator Brandegee, Republican, of Connecticut, had informed it that Houston recently had visited the Foreign Relations Committee that he felt in honor bound to make additional advances to the Governments for which credits had been authorized.

Senators Reed, Brandegee and Brandegee said $2,000,000 additional could be advanced to foreign Governments. Senator Reed declared the Secretary should be prevented from making any further advances while the committee was considering legislation to stop all further loans.

Secretary Houston promised to appear tomorrow to testify, and bring all documents referring to loan negotiations with foreign countries.

Methods of Sellers of Worthless Stock Described in Chamber of Commerce Official Publication

Operations of Promoters of "Co-Operative" Investment Enterprises Also Treated by E. J. Brennan in Article in "Greater St. Louis."

The methods of sellers of worthless stock, and of promoters of "co-operative" investment enterprises, are described in an article written for the February number of "Greater St. Louis," official organ of the Chamber of Commerce, by E. J. Brennan, manager-counsel of the Better Business Bureau. The article is entitled "The Trail of the Gold Brick."

"The better residential districts," Brennan writes, "are more or less immune from the attack of the fake stock salesman at their homes. In the apartment house section of the city stock-selling activities are almost nil. Apartment houses in most cases have telephones in the entrances, and the caller must explain his mission before being admitted. The business man was wary. He demanded to be shown."

"I'll show you how good this stock is," said the salesman, "Mr. So-and-so, president of the 'Improvement National Bank'—and he mentioned the name of a small town in Illinois—has bought some for himself and also for the bank. You can verify this statement by calling him at this number."

Called "Bank President." "The business man put in a call for the 'bank president,' and found that the stock salesman had appeared in the truth. The 'president' stated in no uncertain terms that he had, indeed, purchased a large block of stock for himself and also an additional block for the bank. The latter statement should have been warning enough, but the investor had gotten along to the point where he was beginning to believe that it was a pretty good thing. So he bit. He bought $2000 worth. He has it yet. It is worth a few dollars. The 'bank president' it was later learned, was not a bank president, but a confederate."

The same tale could be repeated many times with infinite variations. Those in all walks of life fall prey to the swindlers. Purchasers have even been found for stock in the League of Nations. A professional man of high standing and the proprietor of a little corner grocery store were hoodwinked with equal facility. The former put $6000 into a purely speculative stock, whose value at present is that of waste paper. The grocer gave a chance company 600 shares of stock to sell. The police are looking for both the customer and the stock. Still another bit almost $15,000 in good securities as collateral with one who posed as a broker. Later, an accurate word sold through an innocent third party and the investor is poor in funds, but rich in experience."

Brennan states that the Better Business Bureau, with headquarters at Hotel Statler, exists for the purpose of giving dependable information, without charge or obligation, concerning investments.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—An unprecedented honor was accorded Secretary of the Navy Daniels last night when both the Democratic and Republican members of the House Naval Affairs Committee gave him a farewell dinner and showered him with verbal bouquets for his efficient administration of his department. In addition to Daniels, the committee had as guests the 10 heads of the Navy Department bureaus.

"We wanted them to hear what we thought of this man," said Representative Butler of Pennsylvania, Republican chairman of the committee. "What the committee thought was summed up in the words of Butler, who told the Secretary that, while members of the opposite party had often differed with him and fought him on the floor of the House, they had come to respect and admire him for his sincerity."

Triumph by Chairman. "You have been of great service," said Butler, "in the war of humanity against glory. You have ever taken the part of human beings. You have raised the morals of the navy to a standard from which no successor in your office will ever depart. You have helped to break down the wall of caste that was being reared high in the navy. By your example of industry you have taught men the disgrace of idleness. You have brought the men and the officers of the navy closer together than they ever were before. We have differed and have scolded one another, but we have never been separated personally. You have been like a stout hickory stick—you would bend sometimes for friendship's sake, but you would never break. Every man of us regrets your going out."

Representative Britten of Illinois, ranking Republican member of the committee, who has been among the sharpest critics of the Secretary, said that Daniels would leave office with his "flag flying at top mast," despite all the storms of criticism that had been launched against him.

All Wanted to Speak. Daniels' record as head of the Navy Department was characterized by Representative Padgett of Tennessee, ranking Democratic member, as one of "spotless purity."

Several other speeches laudatory of the Secretary were made by Democrats and Republicans. Butler said today that every committee member there was primed to make a speech commending the guest of honor, but a halt had to be called because of the lateness of the hour. Daniels expressed his appreciation of the tributes.

Judge Finds Self Guilty, Pays Fine.

Danderine is "Beauty-Tonic"

Immediately after a "Danderine" massage your hair takes on new life, luster and wondrous beauty, appearing twice as heavy and plentiful, because each hair seems to fluff and thicken.

Don't let your hair stay lifeless,
colorless, plain or scraggly. Yes,

too, want lots of long, strong hair,
glistening with beauty.
A 25-cent bottle of delightful "Danderine" freshens your scalp, checks dandruff and falling hair. This stimulating "beauty-tonic" gives to this, dull, fading hair that youthful brightness and abundant thickness.
All drug counters sell "Danderine."

BREWERY WORKERS REPEAT STRIKE VOTE

Action Deferred, However, Pending Outcome of Meeting With Employers Today.

A second vote in favor of a strike was taken last night at Local No. 6 of the Brewers and Malsters' Union, which is composed of beverage makers and bottlers, meeting at Gombin's Hall, 3621 Galena street, but action was withheld, following a general discussion of the situation that followed, and the joint Executive Council of the five locals was authorized to meet the committee of employers again today and decide the issue for the workmen.

In consequence of these instructions, Joseph Hauser, secretary of the Brewers and Malsters' Benevolent Society, said an agreement probably would be reached today. He said the workmen's committee was eager to avert a strike and expected to meet the employers half way with concessions to settle the dispute.

Second Vote for Strike.
A secret ballot vote of 2 to 1 in favor of a strike today rather than accept an agreement proposed by the companies, in which the union control of working conditions would be restricted, particularly as to hiring and laying off of men in busy and dull seasons, was taken Friday night, but was reconsidered last night when the Joint Executive Council, which has represented the men in the conferences with the Employers' Committee, submitted its final report.

A standing vote then was taken,
ratifying the action of Friday night,
but action on this also was deferred,
the leaders prevailing upon the others to give the committee more power and trust it to make a satisfactory contract.

Practice Under Old Contract.
Before the prohibition law went into effect the St. Louis brewery workers had a most advantageous contract. It gave them among other things the 44-hour week and control of the hiring and laying off of workmen during the busy and dull seasons. It was the practice of the union to divide the work in dull seasons among all the men. Instead of laying off certain ones for an indefinite period, the union would lay them off for one week, then re-employ them and lay off others the second week, continuing this method through the dull season. This was one of the objections of the employers and will be conceded.
The new contract proposed by the employers is to run until Oct. 31, 1932, with recognition of the union to bargain collectively, the 44-hour week and continuance of the prevailing scale.

PRELIMINARY JURY TRAINING FOR ST. LOUIS COUNTY WOMEN

Group of Four Invited to Sit With Justice Werremeyer of Clayton in Wife Abandonment Case.

Preliminary training for jury duty, for St. Louis County women, is to be given by Justice of the Peace Werre-meyer of Clayton, who has announced that groups of women will be welcome to sit in his court and advise him as to the disposition of cases involving domestic relations.
Women cannot now serve as jurors,
but an attempt is being made to remove this legal disability.

A group of four women has been invited to sit with Justice Werre-meyer Thursday morning, when a wife abandonment case is to be heard. The women are Mrs. C. C.
Wolff of Clayton, Mrs. Henry W.
Leyhe of University City, Mrs. Julius
C. Strong of Clayton and Mrs. Sue Barge of Wellston.

IMPROVEMENT IN BUSINESS IN NEXT 60 DAYS PREDICTED

Improvement in business is expected in the next 60 or 90 days by K. F. Niemoeller, manager of the Associated Retailers, who returned yesterday from New York, where he attended the conventions of the National Secretaries' Association and the National Retail Dry Goods Association. He said that leading business men from all parts of the country were at the conventions, and they expressed confidence that after the next 30 days a gradual change for the better will come.

"The feeling generally," he said,
"is that people have not been buying, and that their needs have been allowed to go along without having been filled. There is as yet a great buying power among the people,
and, with much cheaper prices,
compared to those of several months ago, being placed on spring goods, there is no doubt that they will buy."

Niemoeller secured the next meeting of the Secretaries' Association for St. Louis. It will be held next summer, the definite date to be fixed later.

WOMAN DIES AT DINNER TABLE

Mrs. Elizabeth Flynn, 55 years old,
of 2521 Howard street, a widow, suddenly became ill while seated at the dinner table at her home at 1 p. m.
yesterday, and died before doctors could be summoned. She lived with her son, Mortimer, and two daughters. The police told the police their mother had complained of illness for several days.

Emil Blacher, 45 years old, of 3625 Russell avenue, a retired merchant, died suddenly at his home at 4:20 a. m. today. His daughter, Bertha, attracted by her father's heavy breathing, summoned doctors,
but he died before they arrived.

BANKS PROPOSE LOAN TO END NORTH DAKOTA'S DIFFICULTIES

Twin Cities and Chicago Financiers
Would Float Bonds Provided
State Bank Is Liquidated.

By the Associated Press.
BISMARCK, N. D., Feb. 12.—A report by H. A. Padlock, secretary of the North Dakota Industrial Commission, in connection with his conference at Minneapolis with Twin Cities and Chicago bankers, who proposed a solution of the financial difficulties in this State, is awaited
here today by State officials.

The bankers propose to float $6,- 000,000 in State bonds provided the Bank of North Dakota is liquidated and other State-owned industries established by the Nonpartisan League are curtailed. Any action along this line would have to be approved by the State Legislature, which will adjourn its regular session in a little more than two weeks.

Whether the plan would be accepted by State officials was not indicated today, though several, including Lieutenant-Governor Howard Wood, speaking unofficially, said the terms could not be agreed upon.
Members of the Independent Voters' Association, which is opposed to the league, at a caucus asserted an offer in the nature of a compromise would be acceptable to them.

Theodore Nelson, secretary of the Independent Voters' Association, said today that the independents will demand that William Lemke, Attorney-General, resign, and that the Industrial Commission be reorganized so that two of its three members will be independents.

Railroad Shops to Close.

By the Associated Press.
WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Feb. 12.—
Notice was posted at the locomotive shops of the New York Central Railroad at Avis today that the shops would close on Saturday until further notice. These shops have been working day and night shifts and employing 650 men.

"JAZZLAND" OWNER FINED AGAIN

Walter Melius, proprietor of "Jazzland," a saloon and dance hall at Grand and Easton avenues, was fined in police court again today, the fine this time aggregating $150. He was fined $200 and costs yesterday for conducting a disorderly place, following a raid on "Jazzland" early Sunday, in which 80 men and 17

women were arrested.

The fines today were for peace disturbance, drunkenness and disorderly conduct, and were based upon an incident that occurred early yesterday at Paul Baccard's saloon, 701 North Channing avenue. A policeman found two Italians outside the saloon with bloody noses, and Nie-

have inside causing a disturbance.
Niehaus was drunk, the policeman testified. Tony Catanzaro and James Bansone, the Italians, also were fined $150 each on the same charge.
Baccard was discharged. Appeals were taken on the three convictions.

ADVERTISING KENTUCKY BEAUTIES

Pair Women of the Blue Grass State Have Great Rivals in Far Off Bulgaria.

The Fame of the Beautiful Women of Kentucky has been told the world over in song and story. Yet we seldom hear of the wondrous Beauty of the Women of Bulgaria far off in the Famous Balkan country of oriental Europe.

BLOOD WILL TELL

The Bulgarians are famous for their knowledge of Botany and produce at least two-thirds of the world's most famous perfume, "Attar of Rose."

Their fellowship with nature for thousands of years has taught these people the secret of health and long life. They seek from nature the means for keeping the blood pure by brewing nature's roots, herbs, leaves, seeds, berries and flowers in tea form. This Bulgarian style of blood tea has been used by the Bulgarians for centuries.

A BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION. Keeping the system in perfect shape is the real secret of a beautiful complexion. Blood that is rich and pure is bound to show in the color of the skin.

Bulgarian style blood tea was introduced in this country many years ago by H. H. Von Schlick of Pittsburgh, Pa., and today is used by millions of happy people who realize its wonderful power as a health regulator.

Bulgarian Blood Tea is mildly laxative and assists nature to remove the poisons that pollute the blood. For constipation, biliousness, headaches, torpid liver and weak kidneys it is one of the best home remedies known to the world today.

Every member of the family should use Bulgarian Blood Tea to break up bad cold and guard against influenza, grippe or pneumonia; just take it steaming hot at bedtime. Your druggist will be glad to supply you with this grand system regulator. Physicians highly recommend it.

ADVERTISING BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't cure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "tired" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 30c.

And to think they cost so little! Made in three varieties—

Lumber Men Oppose Tariff. WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Retail lumber dealers appeared yesterday before the House Ways and Means Committee in opposition to any tariff being placed on lumber. Such a duty would impose a hardship on home builders, it was said. Donald A. Conn of Minneapolis, said that a tariff was not needed to protect American products, as Canadian costs of production were higher than in the United States.

U. R. ATTORNEYS STUDY SPEEDING ORDINANCE

New Law Would Restrict Speed of Vehicles and Cars Passing School Houses.

The new city ordinance forbidding all vehicles, including street cars, from passing school houses between 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. at a rate of speed exceeding five miles an hour, is being studied by attorneys of the United Railways, who are endeavoring to determine what effect the new speed regulation will have on the service. The new law was designed to afford the maximum of protection to school children, in addition to the protective measures of the Police Department, which provides special patrolmen during the opening and closing hours of schools to escort the children across thoroughfares.

This ordinance calls to mind the existing law fixing the maximum speed of street cars at 10 miles an hour east of Grand avenue and 12 miles an hour west of Grand, which, as is known, is not conformed to because of the demand for rapid transit.

When asked how the old ordinance affects the company and what will be the result on service when the new ordinance goes into effect March 1, Thomas E. Francis, of the United Railways legal department, said the service would not be appreciably affected by the new law, just as it had not been impaired by the old, but that it would be more or less costly to the United Railways.

"Regulations Capitalized." "Every regulation imposed upon the United Railways, or upon any public utility for that matter," Francis explained, "is capitalized at some time or other by someone with an alleged grievance. We rarely have a law suit growing out of some accident in which speed is a factor, and the provisions of the old ordinance are not invoked against us, and although there may be no merit in the complaint, yet these arguments tend to prejudice a jury. At any rate, the ordinance supplies a ground for argument."

"We are protected to some extent by regulations of the Public Service Commission, which has given us a schedule to be conformed to, and it is obvious that we could not meet the requirements of the service without being bound to the provisions of the ordinance."

"Ordinance an Annoyance."

"We have never attempted to have the ordinance repealed, because we have never been hurt seriously by its provisions, I suppose, but it is an annoyance, and is certainly not what the public wants. We have never used it as an argument against better service, but there it is, if we cared to capitalize it."

"This new law is obviously far-fetched. The average automobile does not throttle down to five miles an hour in high speed, and who is going to run past school houses in second or low speeds? I do not believe the motorists will pay any attention to the ordinance. As for the street cars, however, we always attempt to meet traffic conditions with care."

"Like the old law, regulating street car speed east and west of Grand avenue, the new ordinance will serve chiefly to set the stage for argument in damage suits."

Francis said the public would not consent in these days of rapid transit to the slowing down of street cars to 10 and 15 miles an hour, and that if the speed regulating ordinances were enforced, the company would need more than a thousand additional cars to meet the requirements of service.

ANNOUNCES SECRET WEDDING

Syracuse Young Woman Bride of St. Louisan.

It became known today that P. G. Anderson of 4131 Westminster place, branch manager for the Pink Rubber Co., was secretly married last Aug. 21 to Miss Edith Hartwell of Syracuse, N. Y., who was visiting in St. Louis.

The bride has since been residing with her parents and ostensibly has been making preparations for her wedding, which it had been announced, would take place this spring. After a number of luncheons had been given in her honor last week as a prospective bride Mrs. Anderson divulged the marriage. Anderson said he expected his bride to join him here in a few days and that they would make their home at the Westminster place address. They have known each other more than two years, he said.

AGED HARDWARE DEALER DIES

Charles Loepte, 81 years old, president of the Charles Loepte Hardware Co., Broadway and Chip-pewa street, died last night at his home, 2624 A. South Jefferson avenue. He was actively engaged in the hardware business in the same location for more than 35 years, but in the last few years had been retired. He was a director in the Chip-pewa Bank.

He was born in Switzerland and came to St. Louis in 1865. His wife survives him. The funeral will be at 9 a. m. Thursday from St. Anthony's Church to St. Peter and Paul Cemetery.

ADELAIDE'S ELASTIC ANKLES
SET PAGE ON ORPHEUM BILL

Mary Haynes and Kate Elinore Are Brightest of Other Entertainers.

Though the formula, "dance and grow thin" has not been verified in the case of Adelaide, danseuse, her taking on of weight has not greatly impaired her suppleness, especially in the region of her ankles, where she is still a paragon of elasticity. With her dancing partner, Hughes, this long-time favorite puts on a colorful, swift-moving act at the Orpheum.

The remainder of the bill encroaches on the field of burlesque with considerable emphasis on modern shoulder-shaking propensities and not too "refined" comedy. The best of the entertainers of this charming school is Mary Haynes, who sings and tells stories, and a close second is Kate Elinore, who appears in a sketch with Sam Williams.

Frank G. Sluicher, Cliff Dixon and company are back with their sketch, "The Little Cottage," which gives a number of girls an opportunity to dance with great abandon to the uplifting melody "Shake Your Little Shoulder."

Tuck and Claire are contortionists and acrobats. The Mijares have a Louis Richter as best man. The good tight-rope and slack-wire act

Fred Berrens plays the violin to the accompaniment of a mechanical piano, and the McBeans are jugglers and hat throwers.

PORTRAIT OF CHIEF JUSTICE
USED TO ASSURE DOUBTERS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—An autographed portrait of Chief Justice White of the Supreme Court of the United States hung in John T. Hettrick's office at 615 Broadway. When anxious plumbers, discussing Hettrick's alleged code of practice system for regulating bids, improving prices and "giving everybody a fair share of the work," inquired of the lawyer whether he was sure his system was within the pale of the law, Hettrick would point at the Chief Justice's portrait and reply, according to testimony given yesterday at Hettrick's trial for a coercion charge before Justice McAvoy by Charles A. Armstrong, a contractor.

"Look at that, gentlemen. I went down to Washington and consulted with Justice White; I explained the whole plan to him and asked for his opinion. The result was quite reassuring."

"Mind you, gentlemen, because of his position as Chief Justice he could not give me a written opinion approving of my code of practice system, for some case might come up in which the United States Supreme Court would have to pass on the questions involved, as he explained to me. But what he said was sufficient, and if he gave me no written opinion, gentlemen, he did the next best thing, for he presented me with this autographed portrait of himself as a token of esteem."

"Legal?" Why, gentlemen, when I accept this $250 retainer from each of you I not only give you my services in the carrying out of the code of practice, but I engage to defend, without further expense to you, any case that may arise in the courts out of the working of this system. It is as lawful as the Constitution itself."

1929 Whisky Importations.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Whisky importations into the United States for 1929 amounted to 167,310 gallons, valued at $1,012,991, as compared to pre-war and pre-prohibition importations of 1,541,663 gallons, valued at $2,153,640 for the fiscal year of 1913. It is announced by the Department of Commerce. Officials of the department said they presumed the liquor was "for medicinal purposes."

HINDUS IN REVOLT IN THE INDIAN STATE OF TONK

Rioting Breaks Out After Arrest of Leaders by Mohammedan Ruler; People Flee Toward British Territory.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Revolution has broken out in the Indian State of Tonk, in Rajputana, says a Reuters dispatch from Allahabad. After agreeing to a demand of the people, the Nawab, Mohammedan ruler of the district, arrested leaders in the movement, whereupon rioting broke out. State troops are actively engaged and people are fleeing toward British territory. The capital of the district is in the City of Tonk, about 50 miles south of Rajput.

Tonk is one of the 21 Indian States included in the Rajputana District, which covers a vast area in the northwestern part of the Indian Peninsula. Tonk has an area of 2553 square miles and in 1911 had a population of 393,181. The most of the population are Hindus.

FORMER KAISER ANNOUNCES HE HAS NOT BEEN INTERVIEWED

Gen. von Gontard Says Former Amsterdam Teacher Was Guilty of a Breach of Faith.

By the Associated Press.
DOORN, Holland, Feb. 15.—Acting on behalf of former Emperor William, Gen. von Gontard yesterday assured both the German and the Dutch Governments that William Hohenzollern never had received or been interviewed by any newspapermen while in Holland. The assertion of Gen. von Gontard was the outcome of a telegram received by the German Government regarding an interview with William Hohenzollern, alleged to have been obtained by Heinrich Petermeyer, and sold by him to an American newspaper agency.

Replying to the dispatch from the German Government, Gen. von Gontard said: "Petermeyer called at Amerongen castle as a former tutor of Count Bentinck's son. At the time he was a teacher in an Amsterdam grammar school, and not a journalist." Gen. von Gontard today told the Associated Press correspondent that Petermeyer called a second time at Amerongen.

"Not only I," said Gen. von Gontard, "but the former Emperor, refused to see him, he having become a journalist since his last visit, although he came on the pretext of bringing greetings from some of the former Kaiser's relatives in Germany. The former Emperor, when he saw Petermeyer, presented him directly throughout their meeting, and the alleged interview was nothing but a breach of faith."

Petermeyer in the alleged interview said that Gen. von Gontard, the only member of the suite of the former Emperor who had remained constantly with him in his exile in Holland, personally presented him to William Hohenzollern and remained throughout the interview except when he went to get an umbrella for the former Emperor.

3 YEARS FOR SHOOTING MAN WHO RAN AT ORDER OF 'HANDS UP'

Charles Malloy Sentenced by Jury on Charge of Assault With Intent to Kill.

Charles Malloy of 4034 North Second street was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary yesterday by a jury in Judge Hall's division of the Circuit Court, on a charge of assault with intent to kill, without malice.

The prosecuting witness was Albin Losiana of 508 Calvary avenue, who testified that on Nov. 23 last he met Malloy at Aurora avenue and the Terminal tracks. He said Malloy asked for a match and then drew a revolver and ordered him to hold up his hands. He said that he refused to raise his hands, but ran, whereupon Malloy fired at him, inflicting a slight flesh wound.

Help Your Kidneys Fight That Cold!

Is a cold, or grip, keeping you miserable? Are you weak, tired, all worn out—tortured with dull, persistent backache and sharp, cutting pains? Do you seem to be getting worse instead of better? Likely, then, your kidneys need help! Colds and grip fill the blood with poisons, which the kidneys must filter off. This sudden rush of new work has no doubt weakened your kidneys and that's why you feel so weak and depressed, and suffer that constant backache and those stabbing pains. You may have headaches and dizzy spells, too, and some annoying kidney irregularity. Don't wait, then, until serious kidney disease sets in. Help your weakened kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

These are St. Louis Cases:

BATES STREET	SOUTH THIRTEENTH STREET	A MANCHESTER AVENUE
Mrs. Chas. C. Fink, 4216 Bates St., says: "Some years ago a cold settled in my kidneys and disordered them. When I was doing my housework, I would have sharp pains catch me in my back just over my kidneys. After using a few boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills I was cured. I am in good health all the time and I can recommend Doan's to anyone that is bothered with their kidneys."	L. J. Becker, Inspector Street Dept., 1815 S. 12th st., says: "When I caught cold it always settled in my back and disordered my kidneys. When I bent over there seemed to be a light fever over my kidneys, and when I sat down I could hardly get up again. A friend told me about Doan's Kidney Pills and after using a few boxes I felt much better. Doan's have never failed to do their work."	Mrs. A. P. Richter, 6714 A Manchester avenue, says: "I had rheumatic pains in my feet and hands, and was in constant pain. My feet and hands swelled badly, and many nights I was kept awake on account of the pain. I doctored and used many different remedies, but never got relief. A friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. After giving Doan's a trial I was much better. Two boxes cured me and the cure is a lasting one."

ACTIVE CAMPAIGN FOR THIRD TERM FOR KIEL OPENS

Headquarters of the "Kiel-on-His-Record Club" Established at Tenth and Olive Streets.

MEMBERSHIP OF MORE THAN 19,000 CLAIMED

Roster Includes Persons Who Signed Petitions Urging Mayor to Run Again—Tom P. Barnett Chairman.

Mayor Kiel's active campaign for a third term was begun today with the opening of headquarters of the Kiel-on-His-Record Club, on the first floor of the building at the southwest corner of Tenth and Olive streets.

The organization is headed by Tom P. Barnett, architect and artist, Maj. Clinton H. Plak is in charge of the headquarters as secretary-manager, James P. Blake, real estate dealer, is treasurer of the club.

Statement by Kiel.

A typewritten statement, given out today by Kiel, announced that no one employed by the city, or connected with the administration, would take an active part in the club's work. "The campaign and headquarters," he said, "will be in direct charge of business men and individual voters who believe that the splendid record made by Mayor Kiel should be rewarded by his reelection."

"The membership of the club," the statement continues, "is composed of the more than 19,000 persons who have signed petitions urging Mayor Kiel to become a candidate, and pledging their support. Petitions pledging support to the Mayor may be signed at the headquarters, which will be open daily from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m."

The petitions already signed include those which were circulated by Street Department inspectors and other city employees.

Large Signs Prepared.

Large signs were prepared today, to be displayed outside the club headquarters, bearing arguments for the Kiel campaign. Some of the phrases to be displayed are:

For two terms Mayor Kiel's record has been close to 100 per cent. His experiment with someone else.

Henry W. Kiel has a record of work well done. Can more promises outweigh proven facts? Vote for Kiel on his record.

Mayor Kiel's best endorsement is his splendid record of performance. Let's play safe and keep him in office.

He is not misled by promises—vote for accomplishments. Mayor Kiel has proven his ability and should be retained.

The record of Mayor Kiel is one of splendid achievement. Why change?

The man to depend upon is the man who has done things. Vote for Mayor Kiel and St. Louis' continued progress.

Thirteenth Ward Committeeman Comes Out for Burkhman.

An announcement of Dr. A. H. Meyer, member of the Republican City Committee from the Thirteenth Ward, that he is for Lieutenant-Colonel Robert Burkhman for the nomination for Mayor in the primary, March 11, appears in line up the political organization of the Thirteenth, the most populous ward in the city, only against Mayor Kiel's candidacy for a third term. The Thirteenth is in the south central section of the city.

John Schmolli, Director of Public Affairs and former committeeman of the Thirteenth, was one of the first to announce himself a supporter of Burkhman. Sheriff Mohrstadt, a leader in the ward, who beat Schmolli in the primary last August, has also come out for Burkhman.

Dr. Meyer's announcement was made yesterday after he had conferred with Collector Koehn, who is the leading backer of Col. Burkhman. He expected that A. M. Brinkman, a member of the Thirteenth, would announce himself for Burkhman within a few days. Joseph Metzger of the Twelfth, who is generally considered as being for Burkhman, also has made no definite announcement.

At told in Sunday's Post-Dispatch, members of the committee are actively supporting Mayor Kiel, and three others are generally claimed as being for Kiel, though they are not saying much about it.

VIOLENCE WILL NOT SOLVE IRISH PROBLEM, KING GEORGE SAYS, OPENING PARLIAMENT

Also Discusses Economic Questions—Extra Precautions Taken in Guarding the Royal Family.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Violence will not solve the Irish problem, King George declared in his speech from the throne to the two houses of Parliament today. One of the outstanding sections of his address referred to Ireland, the King saying:

The situation in Ireland still causes me distress. A misguided section of the Irish people persists in resorting to methods of criminal violence with the object of establishing an independent republic. Neither Irish unity nor Irish self-government can be attained by this means.

The King's speech was brief, but touched on numerous vital questions confronting the Government. At the outset it referred to the coming conference to be held in London and attended by the representatives of the allied, German and Turkish Governments. "I earnestly trust," said King George, "that by this means further progress may be made in giving effect to treaties of peace, in re-establishing concord in Europe and restoring tranquillity in the Near East."

For Trade With Russia.

King George expressed himself as favorably disposed toward a commercial treaty with soviet Russia, saying:

"It is my hope that negotiations for a trade agreement with Russia also be brought to a successful conclusion."

In discussing the Irish question the King said:

"Arrangements for bringing into force the Government's Irish act are now well advanced, and I earnestly trust that in the near future the majority of the people will show their determination to repudiate violence and give effect to an act which counters their own responsibilities of self-government, and provides machinery by which they can attain Irish unity by constitutional means."

Unemployment Discussed.

Solution of the problem of unemployment does not rest entirely with Parliament, the King declared in discussing this important subject.

"The most pressing problem confronting you," he said, "is that of unemployment, which is a result of world-wide restriction of trade. This may be remedied, but it cannot be remedied by legislative means. My Ministers are striving to revive trade and prosperity, and in the meantime, assist those who, unfortunately, have lost employment. You will be invited to pass a bill extending provisions which were made for the unemployed under the unemployment insurance act." (This act provides that employers pay a premium against unemployment, by which they receive Government assistance if they are out of work.)

"A measure will also be introduced in the House of Commons," the King continued, "dealing with the safeguarding of essential key industries of the country and with certain aspects of unfair and abnormal industrial competition. I earnestly hope these efforts may be seconded by the loyal and frank co-operation of capital and labor, in a spirit of mutual trust and confidence that early solution of this grave problem may be found."

To Present Liqueur Bill.

King George announced "the determination of the Government to reduce expenditures to the lowest level consistent with well-being of the empire," and he stated a bill would be presented dealing with the sale of alcoholic liquor in the light of experience gained during the war.

New political alignments and the proposal of legislative and governmental issues of tremendous importance were foreshadowed when Parliament reassembled after a recess of seven weeks. Opposition to the Lloyd George ministry and discontent with many of the policies it has pursued in the recent past, seemed to have reached a climax, and it appeared the stability of the Cabinet would be given its crucial test before the final adjournment of the session in summer.

Attacks on the Government seemed certain to center about Ireland, the conditions prevailing in that island and the plans of the Premier for the future government of the Irish people. Former supporters of the coalition government were among those who were most bitter in their comment on the Irish situation and appeared to be united with the opposition.

"Why has the Government withheld Gen. Strickland's report on the Cork fire?" will be among the first of the interrogations to be placed before the Commons, it is asserted. The General's report already is said to have had the attention of the Cabinet. It is also said that the report reflects adversely on the Crown forces, but that it places the initial responsibility upon the Sinn Feiners, claiming that the fire was directly attributable to the ambushade at Dillon's Cross, which occurred the same day.

Opposes the Lloyd George regime was not forecast, as it was foreseen he probably would be able to control enough votes in Commons to carry through his ministry's plans, but it was evident that in his would be called upon to fight in his most vigorous manner if he was to come unscathed from the struggle.

Ceremonies incident to the opening of Parliament were invested with all their pre-war splendor, but the pagantry of the day was shot through with a sinister note, as elaborate precautions had been taken to protect members of the royal family from violence and to prevent untoward incidents in both houses. Visitors were excluded from galleries and lobbies in the houses of Parliament, and heavy reinforcements of constables and guards had been stationed at the approaches of Westminster and through Whitehall. At strategic points sharpshooters had been placed to shoot any attempt at disorder.

Search of Vaults Thorough.

The ancient practice of searching the vaults beneath the Parliament building, which was initiated in 1666 as a result of the Guy Fawkes gunpowder plot, was carried out with far greater thoroughness than usual this morning, by yeomen from the Tower of London.

Hundreds of thousands thronged the streets of London from earliest daylight in order that they might witness the opening of Parliament, get a glimpse of the King and Queen, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York and other dignitaries on their drive to the Parliament buildings.

Daughter Due Tomorrow.

Henry J. Daugherty of Ohio, head of the Harding pre-convention campaign and generally regarded as the next Attorney General, is to reach London Wednesday for a season of consultation with the President elect. It is with Hays and Daugherty that Mr. Harding talks most in regard to the patronage of his administration and the conversations with them this week are expected to relate to many prospective appointments from the Cabinet down.

It is also likely that such questions as the inaugural address and plans for the special session of Congress will be considered. In describing the purpose of his visit, Mr. Daugherty said he would talk with them about "general business for the good of the order."

One of the President elect's companions in his journey here yesterday was Charles G. Dawes of Chicago.

Brilliant Scene at Opening.

Before noon the floor of the chamber was packed with a block of peers arrayed in their scarlet robes, each with a white ermine hand, flanked on both sides by peeresses in multicolored decollete evening costumes, with tiaras flashing on their heads.

A group of bewigged Judges, some of them in black and others in red robes, were seated just before the throne. In an inclosure to the right was a block of diplomats gorgeously uniformed and with a plentiful display of decorations. Only John W. Davis, the American Ambassador, in the front row, and the German Ambassador, behind the American, wore black evening dress.

As the royal procession entered, the lights overhead burst out with brilliant effect. King George and Queen Mary, with their dark robes trailing a dozen feet after them, bowed formally, first to the right, then to the center and finally to the left.

Everyone in the chamber stood as the King led the Queen by the hand up the steps, where they were seated on the throne. A moment of silence followed while as many members of the House of Commons headed by the Speaker, as could be accommodated, crowded into the opposite end of the chamber.

"My lords, be seated," said the King.

As the assemblage seated itself, the Lord Chancellor, who was having trouble to avoid stepping on his gown, handed the King the manuscript of his speech. Then King George read slowly, while the lights played on the great jewels in their majesties' crowns.

Ceremony Soon Over.

With the reading concluded, the Lord Chancellor took the manuscript, and the King and Queen arose, and the ceremony was over. It had occupied only a quarter of an hour.

After their majesties had bowed again to the three sections of the chamber, the procession filed out at the left of the throne.

Queen Mary wore under her robes an evening gown of lemon color with the blue ribbon of the garter across the breast, and necklaces and a stomacher of splendid diamonds.

No feature of the occasion interested the House more than the presence of the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York.

FOR FEDERAL RADIO MONOPOLY

Daniels Says Government Should Own All High Power Stations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—In a plea for federal control of all high power radio stations, Secretary Daniels, in a letter to Chairman Page of the Senate Naval Committee, today declared that "if there is one monopoly it is monopoly of the air, and this monopoly should not be given over to private interests."

Daniels' letter was in answer to a request from the committee for his opinion on the resolution introduced by Senator Podexter, Republican, of Washington, to regulate the operation of and foster the development of radio communication by government control. Daniels declared:

ence of the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York. The Duke, in the robes of a peer, entered a few moments before noon and took his seat in the front row of the peers. Then came the Prince of Wales, preceded by an officer of the household, who coached him throughout the proceedings.

Prince in Robes of Peer.

The Prince, who also was in the robes of a peer, bowed low before the vacant throne and then stood before his chair on the right of the throne. Everyone was standing, and after a moment his mentor spoke to him, and the Prince subsided into his chair, noticeably embarrassed and blushing.

During the half hour before the ceremonial Ambassador Davis was the object of much attention. Lord Reading, Lord Bickenhead, Lord Curzon and numerous members of the Upper House went forward to greet him.

No personality in the body of the House attracted more attention than Enair Feisel, son of the King of the Hedjaz, who occupied a front seat. He wore a civilian suit with a remarkable white hairdo and a turban.

John R. Clynes, the former Food Controller, last night was elected chairman of the Parliamentary Labor party in succession to William C. Adams, who had held the position for four sessions of Parliament. Adams was compelled to give up his post on account of ill health.

HARDING IN FINAL CONFERENCE WITH HAYS ON CABINET

First Steps of the Coming Administration Also Being Discussed With Republican National Chairman.

By the Associated Press.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Feb. 15.—President-elect Harding and his campaign manager, Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican National Committee, got down to brass tacks today in a final pre-administration conference of the make-up of the Cabinet and the first steps of the coming administration.

Hays generally considered by those close to the President-elect as a likely choice for a place in the Cabinet, and his position as the titular head of the party was conceded as giving him an influential voice in the determination of many questions involving both patronage and policies. The conference was expected to last the greater part of the day, but no definite announcement was made, it was indicated that the most serious problems ahead of the new administration were under consideration.

The postmaster-generalship has been regarded as the most probable appointment for the party chairman, but there still are a number of unknown quantities in the Cabinet situation which make the final allocation of places more or less uncertain. Two or three of those who have been asked to take Cabinet places have yet to send in definite acceptances, and the secretariatship involved may have to be filled by a last-minute shift of men whose status has heretofore been regarded as fixed. That is one of the contingencies that the President-elect is understood to have discussed with Hays.

Proposed Not Made Officially.

It is true that the proposal was never officially made to cancel war debts, but at least a score of different suggestions and plans were laid before the President-elect. Mr. Wilson, French, Italian and British experts all presuming to arrange for a pooling of assets and liabilities but in reality designed to relieve Europe of much of her financial obligation to the United States.

Mr. Wilson grew so sensitive, indeed so suspicious of these plans, that the newspaper correspondents who were present at the plenary conference in February, 1919, will not forget with what abruptness Mr. Wilson interrupted the proceedings. He said that the purpose of the special financial section, which was to be a part of the organization of the League of Nations. The proposal was made as an amendment to the general declaration of principles which had just been adopted pledging all the countries present to a League of Nations and Premier Clemenceau read it so rapidly and in such a perfunctory manner that the President showed signs of uneasiness and asked Mr. Clemenceau where the suggestion had originated and what its purpose was. The French Premier pointed out that the powers of the special committee would be only advisory and that it would not interfere with the freedom of action of individual nations.

Everbody who was in Paris watching the American peace commission from day to day knew of the efforts of the European statesmen to restrict the American proposals that would lighten the financial burdens of Europe. Suggestions for the cancellation of the allied war debt became so numerous that American diplomats were obliged to refuse them. In their informal conversations with the Europeans to make clear two points—first, that the United States was by no means responsible for any debts contracted or writing done in the war prior to April, 1917, and second, that America could not in justice to her own people, who had borne the money through Liberty Bonds, accept any suggestion even remotely affecting the original obligations.

Urged Pooling of Debts.

The European governments, however, sharing to some extent the popular conceptions abroad of America's limitless wealth, insisted upon cancelling the war debts. The proposals made public within the last fortnight are part of the same misunderstanding of America's position, even though it has been made plain by Republicans and Democrats of influence from the very beginning.

Speeches made by men like James M. Beck abroad have often been wrongly interpreted as the American viewpoint. While only a few Americans of prominence have urged the cancellation of the war debt, the majority have been displayed in European newspapers, and have to some encouraged false hopes.

But the European Governments know that the only way President Wilson resented the suggestion at Paris, but that Secretary McAdoo, Secretary Glass and Secretary Houston have each in their turn told European diplomats in unequivocal terms that the American people expected their European debtors to make good their promises to pay.

WILSON RESENTED SUGGESTIONS FOR CANCELLING DEBTS

Incident of Peace Conference Related to Show President From Start Opposed Pooling Schemes.

By DAVID LAWRENCE, A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Defending President Wilson from attack for some of his attitudes at the peace conference may not be fashionable, but in the interest of fair play those who know the facts concerning the alleged promise of Mr. Wilson to secure the cancellation of the allied war debt have no hesitation in saying that, far from welcoming the suggestions made informally to him, he actually resented the idea.

One man, who was with the President during the peace negotiations, tells a story of a dramatic incident that occurred at a luncheon given to President Wilson by the members of the French Chamber of Deputies, which corresponds to the American House of Representatives.

Mr. Wilson fully expected that the affair would be altogether social and was not prepared to talk shop. The President of the French Chamber, however, was determined to discuss with Mr. Wilson the cancellation of the allied war debt, and he committed himself in private conversation to some plan for the pooling of the debts, which was received with such a front of disapproval and with such emphatic remarks that persons at the table regarded the incident later as an indication that so far as Mr. Wilson was concerned, there was no hope of getting him to agree to any cancellation of war debt.

One can easily imagine the life that goes on in these towns as being the same that goes on in small towns everywhere. He can imagine people owning their own homes, pursuing a variety of occupations, attending to their own little affairs, and sharing in the town's common activities. He can imagine them acting like the independent citizens of other communities.

But he will be mistaken. Nothing of the sort goes on there. In the coal mining fields of West Virginia, comprising parts of all 36 counties, the dots on the map do not stand for towns in the ordinary sense. They stand for clusters of houses around a coal mine.

They do not indicate places where people lead an interested, many-sided, and mutually dependent existence. They indicate points at which seams of coal have been opened, tipped, erected and coal has been brought forth as fuel.

True, people live here, but they live here to work. The communities exist for the coal miner. They are the adjuncts and necessary conveniences of an industry. They are not independent groups of people. They are not even called towns in the language of the locality. They are called "camps."

Only One Occupation.

No one owns his own house. No one conducts a store, runs a garage, sells groceries or furniture to his fellow townsmen, amuses them in a movie theater. No one is free to decide today that he will change his occupation tomorrow, because there is no other occupation that coal mining can be changed to. The occupation is to move to some other region.

There is no independent family physician building up a practice by competing with other physicians. There are no local lawyers settling the community's difficulties over property rights, because the ordinary citizen has no property rights and can secure none.

It is seldom that anyone campaigns for a new school or tries to find a better teacher, because these things are taken care of for him. No group of people ever get together and decide that the old church is too shabby and that they will get a new one. They wait till such things are done for them.

Coal Company Supreme.

It is not quite true to say that no one does these things. The coal company does them all. The essential characteristic of a coal-mining civilization, in West Virginia as well as in some other parts of the country, is the extent to which the employer, the company, controls things and can secure none.

Let us take a typical coal-mining plant. In the first place, the company owns practically all of the property. Usually it owns it for a considerable distance around the mine. It owns all of the buildings and the land on which they are erected. It owns the houses, the schools, the movie theater, the Y. M. C. A. (if there is one), the school, the churches—in a word, the whole town.

It employs the physician, and collects something each month from every miner to help pay him. It often guarantees the salary of the minister and not infrequently suppliesments that of the school teacher. The company is thus responsible

Ownership of Lands and Buildings Gives Companies Control Over Lives of Miners in West Virginia

How Provisions Made by Employers Affect Civilization in Camps—Demand for Unionism May Be Born of Desire for Independence.

By Winthrop D. Lane.

The following is the second of a series of articles by Mr. Lane to be published daily in the Post-Dispatch concerning the industrial struggle in the West Virginia coal fields. He recently spent six weeks on the scene investigating the situation at first hand.

Yesterday I tried to picture the conflict that is tearing at the industrial life of West Virginia. I described the forces that are engaged in this conflict—the owners and operators of coal mines in the mountain fields on the one hand, and the men who produce coal, the miners, on the other.

I named the issue: Whether the miners shall have the right to join the United Mine Workers of America and, through this union, to bargain collectively with their employers. I tried to outline the relative positions of power of these two forces, and to describe some of the methods used in the fighting.

Today I want to consider the industrial civilization that lies back of this conflict. This civilization may have an important bearing on some of the psychological aspects of the struggle.

If you will take a map of West Virginia you will see that it is much like the map of any other state. Deep ridges of hills cut across its eastern and southwestern portions, but aside from these there is little to distinguish it from other maps. The same winding lines indicate rivers, the same dots show where its towns are, the same network of railways connects these dots.

Towns Are Coal Camps.

One can easily imagine the life that goes on in these towns as being the same that goes on in small towns everywhere. He can imagine people owning their own homes, pursuing a variety of occupations, attending to their own little affairs, and sharing in the town's common activities. He can imagine them acting like the independent citizens of other communities.

But he will be mistaken. Nothing of the sort goes on there. In the coal mining fields of West Virginia, comprising parts of all 36 counties, the dots on the map do not stand for towns in the ordinary sense. They stand for clusters of houses around a coal mine.

They do not indicate places where people lead an interested, many-sided, and mutually dependent existence. They indicate points at which seams of coal have been opened, tipped, erected and coal has been brought forth as fuel.

No one is free to decide today that he will change his occupation tomorrow, because there is no other occupation that coal mining can be changed to. The occupation is to move to some other region.

There is no independent family physician building up a practice by competing with other physicians. There are no local lawyers settling the community's difficulties over property rights, because the ordinary citizen has no property rights and can secure none.

It is seldom that anyone campaigns for a new school or tries to find a better teacher, because these things are taken care of for him. No group of people ever get together and decide that the old church is too shabby and that they will get a new one. They wait till such things are done for them.

Coal Company Supreme.

It is not quite true to say that no one does these things. The coal company does them all. The essential characteristic of a coal-mining civilization, in West Virginia as well as in some other parts of the country, is the extent to which the employer, the company, controls things and can secure none.

Let us take a typical coal-mining plant. In the first place, the company owns practically all of the property. Usually it owns it for a considerable distance around the mine. It owns all of the buildings and the land on which they are erected. It owns the houses, the schools, the movie theater, the Y. M. C. A. It employs the physician, and collects something each month from every miner to help pay him. It often guarantees the salary of the minister and not infrequently suppliesments that of the school teacher. The company is thus responsible

Everything Company-Owned.

If there is a playground for his children, it is because the coal company has generously supplied it. If the prices charged him for food at the company store are reasonable, it is because the coal company decreases it. If the physical aspects of his life, on the whole, are tolerable, it is because he is fortunate enough to have a beneficent employer.

Evidently the position of the operator can be used either for the good or ill of the community. We shall see later that it is actually used in both ways.

Let be added here, however, that the picture drawn above has nothing to do, directly, with unionism or non-unionism. The civilization of the mining town is much the same where the miners are organized and where they are not; the union functions chiefly in other ways.

But how far this civilization may be the desire for unionism is another matter. It may, in the last analysis, account for much in the miner's state of mind. No one has yet, so far as I know, fully analyzed the psychological appeal of labor

Other Changes Made in Bill Which Was Advocated by Woman Said to Be Unimportant.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 15.—Demands of professional politicians prevailed yesterday afternoon in the consideration in the Senate of the provision in the reform registration bill for which the League of Women Voters has waged a vigorous fight to permit the selection of judges and clerks of election from any precinct in a ward to serve in any precinct in the county.

The women started out to have included in the bill permission for the selection of election officials from any part of the city to serve in any precinct, but, realizing the power of political organizations, agreed in conferences before the Legislature to limit the selection to the ward. Instead of tending to the entire city, they had expected this provision to go through unchanged, however, it being a concession which they reluctantly made.

When the bill came up for engrossment late in the afternoon Senator Kinney of St. Louis, a Democrat, offered an amendment, the effect of which was to return to the present system of requiring that judges and clerks reside in the precinct in which they served as election officials.

Blodgett Amendment Adopted.

A considerable debate in which Senator Blodgett of St. Louis, a Republican, and one of the authors of the bill, spoke in opposition to the amendment, Blodgett offered an amendment which Kinney with all most undue haste accepted. It provided that to be eligible to serve as judge or clerk a person must be a resident, be employed in or engaged in business in the precinct. The amendment was adopted without a dissenting voice.

Its effect is to prevent the Board of Election Commissioners from going into any part of the city for election officials, although it will give the board considerable latitude in the selection of officials than under the present law.

Except for this one amendment the bill was not seriously hurt by amendments in the Senate and is looked upon as an advancement over the present law in safeguarding elections and preventing fraud. In addition to the present qualifications, election officials under the proposed law, are required to be able to speak the English language, and be skilled "in the four fundamental rules of arithmetic."

Some of the Democratic Senators from St. Louis and Kansas City objected to the bill on the ground that it places no limit on the number of employees the Board of Election Commissioners may have and that it increases the salaries of the regular employees of the board from $1800 a year to $2400 for a clerk and $2000 for a judge. Extra employees will receive $6 a day under the present law.

The bill as engrossed in the Senate provides the same registration law for St. Louis, Kansas City and Joseph, each of which is now under a different law. The only difference made in the new law between the cities was at the instance of Senator Lyssaght of St. Joseph, who obtained the adoption of an amendment reducing the salaries of the St. Joseph Election Commissioners from $2000 provided for St. Louis and Kansas City to $600 and the salary of the clerk chief clerk from $2400 to $1500.

Miss Marie Ames, legislative representative of the League of Women Voters and other women's organizations, expressed dissatisfaction after the bill had been engrossed at the change in the provision permitting judges and clerks to be chosen from any part of a ward to serve in any precinct in the ward. She said, however, she was gratified that the other changes made were relatively unimportant.

The bill, if passed, will add some patronage to the Governor, in that it will permit him to name four Election Commissioners in St. Joseph, which now has no Board of Election Commissioners.

Unionism. To the miners working in West Virginia coal mines, any opportunity for collective action, for joining with their fellows in an effort to escape from their prevailing dependence, may seem quite welcome. (To Be Continued in the Post-Dispatch Tomorrow.)

Other Changes Made in Bill Which Was Advocated by Woman Said to Be Unimportant.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 15.—Demands of professional politicians prevailed yesterday afternoon in the consideration in the Senate of the provision in the reform registration bill for which the League of Women Voters has waged a vigorous fight to permit the selection of judges and clerks of election from any precinct in a ward to serve in any precinct in the county.

The women started out to have included in the bill permission for the selection of election officials from any part of the city to serve in any precinct, but, realizing the power of political organizations, agreed in conferences before the Legislature to limit the selection to the ward. Instead of tending to the entire city, they had expected this provision to go through unchanged, however, it being a concession which they reluctantly made.

When the bill came up for engrossment late in the afternoon Senator Kinney of St. Louis, a Democrat, offered an amendment, the effect of which was to return to the present system of requiring that judges and clerks reside in the precinct in which they served as election officials.

Blodgett Amendment Adopted.

A considerable debate in which Senator Blodgett of St. Louis, a Republican, and one of the authors of the bill, spoke in opposition to the amendment, Blodgett offered an amendment which Kinney with all most undue haste accepted. It provided that to be eligible to serve as judge or clerk a person must be a resident, be employed in or engaged in business in the precinct. The amendment was adopted without a dissenting voice.

Its effect is to prevent the Board of Election Commissioners from going into any part of the city for election officials, although it will give the board considerable latitude in the selection of officials than under the present law.

Except for this one amendment the bill was not seriously hurt by amendments in the Senate and is looked upon as an advancement over the present law in safeguarding elections and preventing fraud. In addition to the present qualifications, election officials under the proposed law, are required to be able to speak the English language, and be skilled "in the four fundamental rules of arithmetic."

Some of the Democratic Senators from St. Louis and Kansas City objected to the bill on the ground that it places no limit on the number of employees the Board of Election Commissioners may have and that it increases the salaries of the regular employees of the board from $1800 a year to $2400 for a clerk and $2000 for a judge. Extra employees will receive $6 a day under the present law.

The bill as engrossed in the Senate provides the same registration law for St. Louis, Kansas City and Joseph, each of which is now under a different law. The only difference made in the new law between the cities was at the instance of Senator Lyssaght of St. Joseph, who obtained the adoption of an amendment reducing the salaries of the St. Joseph Election Commissioners from $2000 provided for St. Louis and Kansas City to $600 and the salary of the clerk chief clerk from $2400 to $1500.

Miss Marie Ames, legislative representative of the League of Women Voters and other women's organizations, expressed dissatisfaction after the bill had been engrossed at the change in the provision permitting judges and clerks to be chosen from any part of a ward to serve in any precinct in the ward. She said, however, she was gratified that the other changes made were relatively unimportant.

The bill, if passed, will add some patronage to the Governor, in that it will permit him to name four Election Commissioners in St. Joseph, which now has no Board of Election Commissioners.

Unionism. To the miners working in West Virginia coal mines, any opportunity for collective action, for joining with their fellows in an effort to escape from their prevailing dependence, may seem quite welcome. (To Be Continued in the Post-Dispatch Tomorrow.)

We'll Have to Credit Jimmy Murphy With Preventing Another Chinese Boxer Uprising

Chinaman Forces Murphy to Limit In Clever Fight

George Washington Lee Shows Everything but a Punch, Against Local Boy.

Armory Results

JIMMY MURPHY, St. Louis, out-pointed George Washington Lee of San Francisco eight rounds, 117 pounds. A clear, fast fight.

JIMMY KERN, East St. Louis, had a slight advantage over Benny McGovern, eight rounds, 125 pounds. Much hitting-and-holding by both men.

WILLIAM WALKER, St. Louis, knocked out Al Corey, St. Louis, in the first round. Weight 125 pounds.

AL COREY, St. Louis, defeated Elmer Perera, St. Louis, four rounds, weight 125.

HILARY WALKER, St. Louis, shaded Willie Ramsey, St. Louis, four rounds, 112 pounds.

By John E. Wray.

The white race fought the yellow race at the First Regiment Armory, last night, and the 3000 persons present, to judge by the liberal applause accorded the "heavenly Chinese," decided that the Anglo-Saxon people have no mortgage on fighting ability. In fact, it took one of Jimmy Murphy's best efforts to restrain him a narrow shade, after eight rounds of trying to corner the elusive and yet aggressive George Washington Lee of San Francisco. G. Washington, who is American-born and modern to the extent of being queueless and wearing green silk trunks, had an American flag embroidered thereon, proved that the nice things said about him in advance notices were well deserved. Fast as lightning, he displayed remarkable alertness in sidestepping Murphy's rushes, in blocking punches in midair, in ability to slip and duck, and he showed a really damaging body counter that set Murphy thinking several times during the contest.

Chinaman Can "Take It."

In turn, he also displayed courage and ability to "take it." In two or three of the rounds Murphy found in Chin's head with his right chop, and not always was the Chinaman slipping away with the blow. Had Lee landed such punches on Murphy, the local boxer would likely have hit the canvas, but not so the China boy. Hard wallop after merely made him look slant-eyed, a merely and readjust the rubber mouthpiece upon which he depended to save his lips and teeth. Bleeding from the mouth and nose, neither his fighting nor his expression changed in the least.

In addition Lee, although educated in schools that are partial to trickiness and illegal fighting, showed a keen appreciation of the local rules, and a willingness to observe all of them. In fact, he fought a cleaner bout than even Jimmy, although there was little to complain of in either.

The weak point about Lee's make-up at present seems to be his lack of a punch. He hit Murphy frequently with his left and now and then crossed his right to the head; but his best work was in body punching. At finishing he fairly outdid the American boy.

Lee Makes Murphy MIA.

Murphy was aggressive from the beginning and landed several hard wallops in the first two rounds, staggering the Chinaman in the second. In return he was taking some light left blows to the head; but Jimmy missed many leads through the Chinaman's cleverness.

In the third, acting on Eddie Randall's instructions, the Chinaman rushed and took the aggressive, and after relinquishing his attempts to keep the lead, except when beaten back by the superior power of Murphy's blows. Even when this pounded back and rocked with hard right, the manner in which he came back and bored in at Murphy gained him the applause of the spectators.

The third and fourth rounds were good ones for the Chinaman and once he rocked Murphy with a timely uppercut. It was in the fifth and sixth rounds that the Oriental took his worst pounding, Murphy looking very good these periods; but in the seventh and eighth back came the Chinaman. Once he drove Murphy backward across the ring from rope to rope, punching him solidly in the body and forcing Murphy to fall. He leaped back from Murphy's clutch and peeped him to the head, forcing the fighting every inch of the way.

In the eighth both boys were trying hard without much margin either way, save that Murphy's new Chin's mouth and nose bleed. At the finish the spectators gave a fine hand for both boys. Numerous Chinamen witnessed the contest.

McGovern Is Knocked Down.

Benny McGovern, fighting for the first time in a year, gave the aggressive and physically superior Jimmy Kern the fight of his life in the semiwindup at eight rounds. Both were there at the finish and Kern, although fighting a less impressive bout than usual, had a shade.

At one time it appeared that McGovern would decline on the canvas for the count. This was in the fourth round, when he was beaten down by a right to the jaw. Benny was dazed and did not take the full count, rising as Referee Haines was telling five. He clinched it and came through safe in the fifth. He slowly came back in the following rounds and in the seventh and eighth looked better than at any time during the bout.

McGovern's defense and experience were too great for Kern, who, however, seemed to hold little fear of McGovern's punch. This lack of caution caused him to be out.

SPORTS THROUGH EYES

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1921.)

JESS WILLARD, having lived quietly on the farm out in Kansas, with plenty of time to think, has at last figured out just how Jimmy Dempsey happened to beat him. According to Jess it was "an accident."

As Jess recalls it, Dempsey hit him while Jess was trying to "break clean," thereby knocking Jess so silly he remembers nothing that followed.

I don't doubt that Jess had difficulty in gathering his scattered thoughts after the fight. He jumped out of the ring, pushed through the crowd and ran all the way to his abandoned training quarters across the park from the arena, where he was discovered hours afterward. And he told Tex Rickard next morning that he didn't remember anything except that Dempsey hit him one punch on the head.

Don't like to rob Jess of any pet delusions, but his recollection is a bit muddled if he thinks Dempsey hit him coming out of a clinch. Jess may have intended to clinch, but the intention was as far as he got.

What really happened was this: Willard went into the ring expecting to have Dempsey rush him wildly, emboldened thereon, proved that the nice things said about him in advance notices were well deserved. Fast as lightning, he displayed remarkable alertness in sidestepping Murphy's rushes, in blocking punches in midair, in ability to slip and duck, and he showed a really damaging body counter that set Murphy thinking several times during the contest.

Buff Did Not Win Flyweight Title, Mason Declares

Champion Shows Contract Showing Weight Was Agreed Upon at 116 Pounds.

Frankie Mason, America's flyweight (112-pound) champion, declares that reports sent out from New Orleans that he had lost his title to Johnny Buff, when outpointed at New Orleans a few days ago, were incorrect.

Mason, who was at the Armory ringside last night with a badly bruised but well-banded eye, showed the contract for his fight with Buff. It called for 116 pounds weight, not the flyweight limit of 112. The title, therefore, could not pass, Mason asserts.

Mason weighed slightly over 105 pounds and Buff was over 112, Mason declared.

Mason thus far in 1921 has fought nine battles and in three months scheduled this month. His next clash is with Kayo Brown of New Orleans at Springfield, Ill. He fights Johnny Ritchie at Des Moines, and an opponent yet to be named at Fort Wayne, Ind., later in February. Twelve fights in eight weeks is "going some."

Mason, although well past 30 years old, said that he fought the 15 rounds against Buff in fine condition and could have gone five more without the least trouble. He is no longer suffering from neuritis.

Nate Lewis, manager of Joe Weiling, has wired Leo Heiman of the Future City A. C. that Weiling will be here for the Benny Leonard bout of Feb. 24 five days before the fight. Weiling is to prepare for the contest at Hot Springs. Many out-of-town reservants at the Leonard mill have already been received.

LEONARD IS OFFERED $20,000 TO OPPOSE RICHIE MITCHELL AGAIN

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 15.—Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, yesterday was offered $20,000 by Tom Brown, local promoter, to meet Richie Mitchell of Milwaukee in this city some time in March. The bout would be 10 rounds, no decision.

DEMPEY TO MAKE TOUR OF EUROPE NEXT MONTH

BOSTON, Feb. 15.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, will make a European tour next month by way of England. He will exhibit bouts that will extend over six weeks. Present plans provide only for his meeting sparring partners, who will accompany him as he takes part in no contests before his bout with Carpenter, which has been set for March 2 at New York.

Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, made this announcement during a meeting at the time of the local championship fight between Dempsey and Joe Morgan, who recently won the title by knocking out Jack Kearns. Kearns' manager, who is in touch with European promoters, and dates for the champion's appearance were assured.

COLE STARTS WORK FOR GO AT ARMORY MARCH 14

Billy Cole, local lightweight, who just recovered from a long sick spell, today started training for a match with the American champion, March 14. It was announced by Manager Straus. Cole is willing to meet any boy his weight in the city, including Joe Morgan, who recently won the title by knocking out Jack Kearns. Cole had an important match on when he was forced to quit the ring because of illness.

BOXING COMMISSIONERS STOP GRIFFITHS-PERRY GO

DETROIT, Feb. 15.—Boxing Commissioners stopped the Johnny Griffiths-Jack Perry bout last night in the eighth round, after Griffiths had been warned several times for holding. Perry had led the fighting all the way.

Dayton Boxing Doomed.

DATON, O., Feb. 15.—Boxing was given a death blow in Dayton yesterday when City Manager W. C. Barber announced that the city would not issue a license for the proposed fight between Griffiths and Perry for matches to be staged within the city limits. He based his refusal on the ground that boxing is against the State law which prohibits prize fights when a purse is up.

Boring Authority Dies.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 15.—Frank B. Boring, authority on boxing, died here early today after two years' illness. He was 55 years old. Fifteen years ago he went to London, where he entered newspaper work, devoting most of his efforts to articles on pugilism. He remained in London until two years ago.

Levisky-Wells Bout Off.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—The 20-round boxing match between Battling Levisky of New York and Bombar Levisky of New York, which was to have been held at London, Feb. 15, has been canceled, according to a cable message received yesterday.

Welling Starts Training.

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—Joe Welling, the Chicago heavyweight, accompanied by Eddie Mahoney, a Pacific Coast 133-pounder, left here last night for Hot Springs, Ark., to prepare for his eight-round contest with Benny Leonard in St. Louis, Feb. 24.

Roy Moore Disqualified.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 15.—Roy Moore of New York, who was disqualified for fouling in his bout with Jimmy Kramer of Boston, here, last night, the match was stopped in the third round.

Lawler Defeats Carmen.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 15.—Jack Lawler easily won the referee's decision over Young Carmen in a 15-round bout here last night. Lawler knocked Carmen down in the second round.

Pikeway Basket And State Title Events Conflict

Washington and Missouri University Prep School Tournaments Scheduled on Same Date.

The five local high schools will in all probability compete in the Washington University intercollegiate basketball tournament, next month, according to authoritative statements from High School League authorities.

Under the present ruling Sordan, Central, McKinley, Yeamman and the league ruling, which prohibits its members from athletic contests with schools more than 18 miles distant from St. Louis, this rule was passed a number of years ago, when the question of sending local fives to the State high school tournament at Columbia, Mo., was discussed.

Now, it is likely that the scholastic leaders will make the Pikeway games an exception, in order to aid the tournament and because the play will be held locally. It is believed that the contests will present an incentive for those quarters which are put out of the league race early in the season.

The date has not yet definitely been set, but it is believed that it will be held on March 13, 19. The previous week would bring about a clash with the Illinois sectional eliminations, while a week later would conflict with a Southern Illinois tournament.

Other schools may enter, but these are the only ones that have announced their intentions.

Brownies Accept Palmero's Terms

Cuban Southpaw Is Ordered to Report to Fohl at Bogalusa, La., Next Week.

Business Manager Bob Quinn of the Brownies yesterday wrote Emilio Palmero, the Cuban southpaw, that he was expected to report to Manager Lee Fohl at Bogalusa, La., next Tuesday, when the first workout for the local American League is scheduled.

Palmero, who has had a previous trial in the majors, in 1920 had a great campaign in the White A League, pitching for Omaha. He wrote Quinn "that he expected a major league salary and a fair trial." Quinn's reply ordered him to report and officially sign when he faced the team in the South.

Manager Fohl is expected here from Cleveland Friday to take the first squad to the Suncoast. The players who will go south from here also are expected to arrive in the next few days.

Cardinals Sign Boyer.

From Cardinal headquarters, it was announced yesterday that Chester Boyer, a pitcher obtained from the Boston club, in the West Coast League, had signed his contract. He was picked up by Scout Charles Barrett, who expects him to make good.

It also was announced that Eddie Dunn, the St. Louis catcher, had been unconditionally released to Milwaukee.

Tim Grisenbeck, a catcher, obtained from the Cubs club of the West Texas League, sent in his signed contract to the Cardinals today. Grisenbeck, who made the last Eastern League, had signed his contract. He was picked up by Scout Charles Barrett, who expects him to make good.

It also was announced that Eddie Dunn, the St. Louis catcher, had been unconditionally released to Milwaukee.

Collins and Heddon to Compete for Balkline Championship Tonight

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 15.—Edgar T. Appleby of New York upset all predictions in the semifinals of the national amateur 152-balk line billiard championship tournament last night and defeated Perry Collins of Chicago, the title holder, 306 to 200.

Collins had high runs of 22, 23 and an average of 8-25.

Heddon and Collins will play off the title tonight.

28 PIKEWAY BASEBALL MEN OUT FOR PRACTICE

Twenty-eight candidates reported for the first baseball practice of the season at Washington University yesterday afternoon. The gathering had been originally set for the gymnasium, but because of the fine weather the squad worked on the campus. Assistant Coach Matt Hedges will be in charge of the team and yesterday instructed the men. However, he will not take over the team until the basketball season is completed. Until that time Capt. Monty Lyon will be the leader.

CADDOCK BEATS LONDOS AFTER 2-HOUR STRUGGLE WITH A HEAD SCISSORS

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Jim Londos, Greek wrestling god, met a casual grappler in Earl Caddock at the St. Louis Athletic Club last night and was thoroughly tossed after a fiendish struggle that lasted 2 hours, 3 minutes and 3 seconds.

A head scissors and wrist lock brought the stout little Greek down on his back, but Caddock was in quick succession, and the Greek, trying to make the most of his extraordinary strength, whirled Caddock in mid air as he tried to break away. Once he succeeded, but he was as dizzy as Caddock was and the former champion made the most of the Greek's grogginess.

Londos made a brave effort to break this last hold, but to no purpose. Caddock pressed the very life out of him, and there was nothing left for George Bohn to do but slap Caddock on the back in token of victory.

It was a ferocious struggle from first to last and a hurtful one, too, both men receiving punishment enough to have ended a dozen matches.

Londos was always outwrestled by his built-in strength, but Caddock, who made the last Eastern League, had signed his contract. He was picked up by Scout Charles Barrett, who expects him to make good.

It also was announced that Eddie Dunn, the St. Louis catcher, had been unconditionally released to Milwaukee.

MINIMUM WAGE LEGISLATION UNLIKELY AT THIS SESSION

Senate Resolution Provides for Commission to Report Bill to Next Legislature.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 15.—The Senate today adopted a resolution providing for the appointment of a minimum wage commission of nine members to study the subject of minimum wage and report to the next Legislature a bill establishing a minimum wage for women.

Following the adverse committee report yesterday on the bill introduced this year, today's resolution, if adopted by the House, as it probably will be, means there will be no minimum wage legislation at this session.

Under the resolution, three members of the commission will be appointed by the Senate, three by the House and three by the Governor.

WOMAN GETS $10,000 JUDGMENT FOR ALLEGED X-RAY INJURIES

Sued for $15,000, Saying She Was Permanently Injured During Examination of Teeth.

A jury in the United States District Court today returned a judgment verdict of $10,000 in favor of Mrs. Blanche Eiden, a resident of St. Louis, in her suit against the pathological laboratory of Dr. J. H. Eiden, who she alleged, on Oct. 16, 1929, while an X-ray examination of her teeth was being made in the laboratory in the University Club Building, she was burned and permanently injured by an electrical current which was communicated with an operating table on which she was lying.

POSSE TAKES MURDER SUSPECTS

Brothers Wanted in Iowa Captured Near Langdon, Mo.

ROCKPORT, Mo., Feb. 15.—Arrest for a holdup, were captured yesterday afternoon southwest of Langdon, in this county. A large posse of officers and citizens had been searching the Missouri bottoms west of Rockport since morning, the two Hickmatts having been trailed down the Missouri River bank, where they were attempting to find a crossing into Nebraska.

Temple Shandy of Phelps City confronted the fugitives and demanded their surrender. He was one of small detachment of men, including Marshal Bennington of Rockport, who were following the trail of the Hickmatts. More than 100 men from Shenandoah joined the search late in the day.

HOUSE PASSES TAG PLANT BILL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 15.—The House today, by a vote of 113 to 4, passed a bill to appropriate $12,000 to equip a plant in the State penitentiary to manufacture State automobile license plates.

The House failed to give a constitutional majority to a bill to shorten the season for taking fur-bearing animals from three to two months. The vote was 65 for and 51 against the bill.

Columbus Steel Plant to Close. COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 15.—The Columbus plant of the Carnegie Steel Co., employing 850 men, will close down for an indefinite period on Feb. 19, according to announcement made today. Present business depression was given as the cause of the shutdown.

Finish the Winter With Coke

Right now is a good time to give coke a fair trial. Instead of ordering enough coal to last till warm weather, tell your dealer to deliver a load of coke. Prove to yourself, as thousands of others have done, that coke is the most economical and most satisfactory fuel to burn in any furnace. Coke is easy to handle, makes no smoke, soot or dirt, and few ashes.

To get the best results, be sure to phone Main 83 for an appointment with one of our fuel experts. He will be glad to show you the best methods of burning coke in your furnace.

OCEAN STEAMERS

Glasses
Made for You

From first to last, in the process of making, your glasses should be made for YOU, personally and individually.

Frames, shape and size of lenses, all should be considered with reference to your personal requirements by one who understands such things, and is interested in your eyeglass satisfaction and welfare.

Such men you will find in the Aloe organization. And you find only such men in each Aloe store.

Five minutes from anywhere downtown—and uptown.

SENATE COMMITTEE KILLS ANTI-FRATERNITY BILL

Action Taken After 29 St. Louisans Appear at Hearing in Opposition to Measure.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 15.—The bill to bar fraternities and sororities from high schools was killed in the Senate Committee on Education yesterday afternoon, after a delegation of 29 persons from St. Louis had appeared in opposition to the measure.

Frank Hemenz, member of the Board of Education of St. Louis, furnished an interesting portion of the hearing when he informed the Senators that the friction between the school authorities and fraternities in St. Louis had been due to the "domineering attitude" of the former Superintendent of Instruction. Now that his regime is ended, Hemenz said, he believes that the Board of Education and the new Superintendent can regulate the fraternities without aid from the Legislature.

Hemenz said that he had not come to Jefferson City to take part in the anti-fraternity bill hearing, but appeared to explain one phase of the situation, since the hearing and his visit coincided.

Mrs. J. P. Duball and Mrs. J. H. Leek, mothers of sorority girls; Albert Chandler of Kirkwood, W. T. Rutherford, Walter S. Burns, Waldemar Wright and M. A. Urquhart, representing the parents' organization formed to fight the bill, appeared before the committee. Eight fraternities and five sororities of St. Louis had delegates present. The House Education Committee, to which the anti-fraternity bill has been referred, has not acted on the measure. Chairman Fair stating that neither proponents nor opponents had mentioned it to him.

MISSING OFFICIAL'S COMPANY FILES BANKRUPTCY PETITION

By the Associated Press.
LA CROSSE, Wis., Feb. 15.—The Multifone Manufacturing Co. of Eau Claire, whose president, E. J. Sallstead, was alleged to have been burned to death in his summer cottage, yesterday filed a petition in bankruptcy. The company lists assets of $18,731.93 in its petition, while liabilities scheduled total $195,804.13. Included in the assets is an item of $15,000 life insurance held by Sallstead in the Travelers' Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn.

Insurance companies have refused to pay life insurance policies held by Sallstead on the ground that he is still alive. Their operatives, it is claimed, having traced the manufacturer and his stenographer as far as Superior after the fire which destroyed the summer cottage. Bones found in the ruins of the cottage are declared to have been exhumed from a grave yard and planted in the cottage before it was destroyed by fire.

MURDER THEORY DISPROVED

By the Associated Press.
MADISON, Wis., Feb. 15.—The "murder mystery" which has grown up around the death of Richard S. Lawrence, formerly of Madison, supposed to have been killed by a train March 21, 1918, was cleared up here last night with the announcement of results of an official examination made of the body. Investigation by Dr. C. H. Bunting, University of Wisconsin pathologist, and Dr. W. F. Lorenz of the Mendota Psychiatric Institute proved, according to their statements, that Lawrence came to his death by being struck by a train.

The widow of the man had alleged that her husband had been murdered for a fortune he was supposed to have possessed and that his body had been changed in the grave to ward off suspicion. Summons in a conspiracy suit against Mrs. Lawrence and Frederick A. Mix, who supported her in her claim, were issued in behalf of E. J. Lawrence, nephew of the dead man.

Cow Gives Birth to Triplets.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
POPULAR BLUFF, Mo., Feb. 15.—A cow belonging to H. Cowen of this city has given birth to triplets. The cow is a fine Jersey, of small size. The calves were born Saturday and all three apparently are in the best of health.

ACTIVE CAMPAIGN FOR THIRD TERM FOR KIEL OPENS

Candidates by the club, has decided tentatively to recommend Aldermen Kuba of the First Ward, Wiebe of the Fifth and Pett of the Eleventh, also Arthur W. Keller, candidate in the Twenty-first, and S. A. Nangle in the Twenty-fifth.

The same committee has previously endorsed the candidacies of Aldermen Weil of the Seventh, Lohmann of the Ninth, Stockhausen of the Fifteenth and Udell of the Twenty-third, for re-election.

The club will not act on the recommendations until after the filing time for candidacies ends, Feb. 25. The special committee favors Burkham for Mayor and supports Comptroller Nolte for re-election.

Plans for extending the Citizens' Republican Club organization to the negro voters were announced by Sam Lewis, who represents the Twenty-third Ward on the club's board of directors. A meeting for negroes is to be held tomorrow night at 2726 Pine street.

Among seven announced candidates for Alderman from the Thirtieth Ward, the precinct organization has endorsed Joseph Heckel, an advertising solicitor. Heckel filed his candidacy yesterday, following the meeting of the precinct organization Saturday night at the home of Dr. Meyer, the ward committeeman.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that our platform will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight for the rights of the people, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Lindenwood Hikers.

The street car service is hard on our West Enders. According to "U. R. Patron" they are compelled to wait as much as 20 minutes for a car; they have not enough waiting rooms, and the rooms they now have are not properly furnished. These appalling conditions should be remedied at once. Furniture is not so expensive now as the U. R. cannot buy up some overstuffed or other upholstered chairs and lounges for these waiting rooms, and they should have a waiting room on every corner. However, the U. R. is a rather stubborn bunch and may not do this for their sorely tried West Enders. In this case would advise U. R. Patron to move to his neighborhood; he could then spend those 20 minutes or even more walking to the car line. We are not worried about waiting rooms with cushioned furnishings, as we have nice soft knee-deep mud to wade through and are thankful to find a friendly telegraph pole to lean against until the "Grove Limited" finally comes jolting along. We do not have to bother about our moving "cold bath" when it is raining, as we are usually soaking wet after our ride or more walk. Some 3000 of us are taking this walk twice daily. So come out and like us.

Brindell's Conviction.

The conviction of Brindell shows that organized labor must fight the grafters, sharks and radicals in its own ranks. The harm has been done and a black eye has been inflicted on labor and it is bound to reflect on them for years to come.

J. LAWRENCE WARHOWER.

The Demon Whistler.

No doubt you have had the undesirable opportunity of hearing the nerve-racking noise rendered by the nuisance, namely "The Whistle Peddler." Day in and day out, week after week, for several months have been unable to accomplish any work successfully on account of this peddler's shrieking noise.

It seems as though he is mounted on our block, noisy statue, and he does not only play upon one's nerves, but also creates a dislike with the public of the popular airs.

The police might at least keep him on the go up and down the streets, so that not only our neighborhood but others as well may suffer, as we are not at all satisfied.

Calling upon you for help in this desperate struggle, we are respectfully,

PRISCO BUILDING EMPLOYEES.

Like Trailers.

A letter from a U. R. patron suggests a new type of trailer. I disagree with him. I have found that a trailer rides much smoother than a motor-driven car. I agree with the criticism of the trailer type of car on the Grand Line. I hardly think anybody likes them. A. M. R.

Madewine's Book.

In publishing Lord Mayor Madewine's posthumous article on the "Principles of Freedom," the Post-Dispatch conferred a favor on its readers which entitles it to their commendation and gratitude. It places lofty sentiments there expressed tend to clear the atmosphere.

It is something further was necessary to justify his action, besides the wonderful fortitude and determination which caused him to stand up for his principles. It places this noble man to lay down his life for a principle, the fundamental ideal on which that sacrifice was based, as displayed in his book, provides it. It places the struggle for Irish freedom on a stronger and nobler foundation in the minds of those who hitherto were ill informed and it inspires the wish that those noble ideals of manly dignity and national self-consciousness be not wiped out in the blood of those who still fight for the sacred cause of freedom for which he gave his life.

THOS. P. O'CONNELL.

A Hypothetical Question.

If a man must steal a Ford and after he has done so finds that he stole the car with which a salesman must make his living and also finds his samples, etc., you might say his tools with which the salesman has to work, should not the man that took the car be a good enough sport to set samples somewhere that his owner might have them to work with to pay for his stolen car? F. P. M.

Wow!

Many women who complain so bitterly about present fashions probably have reasons for their grievances. One of the prevailing mode is difficult for the average-necked sisters. And those members of the comic sorority who happen to be low-hipped must needs look on the short skirt as a ghastly revelation. Few who are more fortunate are sorry for them. But because of their unfortunate delusions about the rest of us be regarded as "other" Republican," says Marie Henry. But one would think from the way they are watching the bottles that a refilling was momentarily expected.

DERNIER CRI.

CRITICISM AND CAPITOL ART.

Evidently the humor of the Missouri Senate in placing the Capitol decoration bill upon the temporary calendar is not to be construed as hostility to this fine and enduring work. The Senate was not as familiar as it might have been with the scheme of decoration or the personnel of the Capitol Decoration Commission. This is indicated in Senator Irwin's assertions that the commission sends to Paris for its artists and that it ought to be made up of business men. Only one commission has gone to Paris, as against four to our own State. The commission has been free to go where it will to have the thing well done, and the Senate would not want so important an undertaking as decoration of the new Capitol to be any less free than that. Nor is it sound criticism to say that the commission should be made up of business men, since it is chiefly made up of business men now. Mr. W. K. Hixby, who is a member of the commission, is a St. Louis business man of the first magnitude. Mr. J. F. Downing, another member, is one of the principal bankers of Kansas City. Mr. A. A. Kocian, a third member, is a St. Louis art dealer. The president of the commission is Dr. John Pickard, instructor in the history of art at the Missouri State University. The fifth member is Mrs. William R. Painter, representing one of the chief women's historical organizations in Missouri. That would seem an admirably constituted and balanced commission, and not one made up, as Senator Irwin charged, of artists.

What the Senate feels is its incapacity to judge the value of what it is buying and for which it is spending a considerable sum of public money. That same incapacity is true of most of us, whose assurance that good art is being placed in the Capitol must primarily derive from the personnel of the commission. Dr. Pickard is a professional art critic. Mr. Hixby has been for many years chairman of the Board of Control at the St. Louis Public Art Museum, and has the largest private collection of art in Missouri. Mr. Kocian is by association and experience naturally much better able to judge of what the commission is placing in the Capitol than one man in ten thousand. It is not bad art that is being placed in the Capitol. As a matter of fact, completion of the scheme of decoration laid out by the commission will make the Missouri Capitol one of the notably decorated public buildings of the United States. Had it nothing else than the eight considerable pendentives being done by Frank Brangwyn of England it would rank very high.

Happily, the Senate does not intend defeating the Capitol decoration bill, which appropriates $300,000 for this work. It is too fine a work to be dealt with in anything less than the spirit which prompted prior Legislatures to begin it, and the present Legislature will scarcely care to stop short or interfere with the progress of a work so reflective of pride in the rich and colorful history of Missouri. The bill does not ask anything from the general revenue. It merely appropriates for the use of the commission funds raised by the Capitol tax which cannot be used for any purpose outside the Capitol building. The commission has bought a great deal with the $100,000 given it by the last Legislature. Senator Irwin thinks some of the paintings have cost a lot of money, but in truth most of the artists have received very little for their work. Brangwyn is doing all eight of his canvases for less than $25,000, a price he would not think of making except for the public and monumental nature of the work. The Legislature is making no mistake in decorating the Capitol. It can go ahead in the assurance that the State is doing nothing finer—nothing so certain to be a source of joy to the people and to win the praise of the future.

With all those automobile men on the Police Board the department ought to speed up.

TAXATION ENLIGHTENMENT.

The publication of some of the striking figures of the Rockefeller fortune will not diminish the popularity of the personal income tax. Rather, it comes as a convenient reinforcement of the vote taken by the National Council of the Economic League favoring the continuation of the income tax as an equitable means of raising revenue.

Certainly the Economic Council cannot be charged with bias against the taxing of wealth when a majority expressed itself as opposed to the present rate of surtax on incomes in excess of $5000, and all but 10 per cent of this majority favored the diminishing of the rate.

But more important than the league's opinion of the income tax is its endorsement of three propositions calling on Congress for information on which a more discriminating opinion of Federal taxes might be based. The first of these propositions aims to ascertain what proportion of the proceeds of each tax is eaten up in the expense of administration and collection. The second seeks information of the cumulative effect of any Federal tax on the cost of living. The third inquires what taxes might be employed that would directly or indirectly reduce the cost of living.

The merits of our several forms of Federal taxation cannot be known until light has been shed on at least the first two of these questions. And until we know the actual effect of our several forms of taxation we cannot intelligently decide whether or not they should be continued in their present form.

LEGISLATIVE ACTIVITY.

The signs of activity in speeding up legislation on the part of the Governor and the State Legislature are gratifying.

The conference of Republican members of the General Assembly with the Governor was a significant step towards co-operation in working out the Governor's program. A committee of the House and Senate has been selected to keep in touch with the Governor and both houses and to speed up bills that ought to pass. It is a sort of steering committee to push necessary legislation.

The message delivered by Gov. Hyde today outlines the legislation to which the party is pledged and which he says ought to be placed on the statute books. The message covers the entire program which he thinks is needed to assure progress in the State and to which he feels the party is bound.

The Legislature has its work marked out. The program in the main is excellent, embracing school advancement, election reforms, workmen's compensation, reduction of taxation, reorganization of departments, protection of women and children and a budget system. Good roads legislation is reserved for a special session and equalization of assessments, with reduced tax rates, is promised.

Details of most of the bills are yet to be worked out and we indulge the hope that the Legislature will not only do the work, but do it right. Let us have sound laws, without political tricks or jokers.

There is time enough left to do the work well, but further delay would be fatal and inexcusable.

REVISION BY INTELLIGENCE.

The State constitutional convention, assuming that such a body is authorized by the voters of Missouri at the special election to be held Aug. 2 next, would be lost in a sea of conflicting counsel and inaccurate knowledge were not some responsible agency established for the systematic collection and editing of information with which the work of the convention will be concerned.

Such an agency is provided in a bill which has been introduced in both houses of the Legislature. This agency, according to the terms of the bill, would take the form of a bipartisan, unpaid commission of six members, on which no party should have more than three representatives, to be appointed by the Governor as soon as the convention is authorized by the electorate. This is a service which must be performed, not merely for the obvious reasons but in view of the experience of other states which have undertaken a similar task.

There is no prospect of serious opposition to the proposed measure as it is sponsored by the New Constitution Association of Missouri, which contains among its officers the chief political powers of the State. Only a slip in the rush of business or deliberate desertion by its friends or political chicanery could suppress a measure indispensable to the intelligent revision of the fundamental law of the State.

New York's Health Commissioner is finding it difficult to prevent typhus-infected patients from coming into the country. There are other disadvantages in our open-door invitation to all kinds of immigrants.

HOG ISLAND NEEDED A DAWES.

Not all the high tension of the war was over there. Over here we knew the hectic urge. Lloyd George's "Ships and ships and still more ships" was a Macedonian cry. Our answer was historic. In that answer was Hog Island, the key to which has just been handed to the Government in stately ceremonial. Hog Island was one of the war's miracles. A desolate marsh was converted into the world's greatest ship-building plant in impossible time. The whole procedure of orthodox business was junked. No dilatory tint of red tape stained the record. The color scheme was chain lightning. Money was spent magnificently.

The men in charge of that enterprise were business men. As such they knew values. They knew that in this venture success and speed were identical terms. They knew that haggling about prices in order to save money would be criminal stupidity. They may have made mistakes, but they were not guilty of that blunder.

Their job was to build ships and to get ready for the production of ships on a scale never known before. That is precisely what they did. And they built good ships, which have also proved themselves in raging storms. It will be remembered, however, that Senator Hiram Johnson of California could never see anything at Hog Island except a "Saturnalia of waste," and it ought to be remembered that the Senators on Mr. Johnson's side of the chamber acquiesced in his demagogic denunciation of an achievement that commanded the admiration of our allies. It is a pity that Hog Island did not have a Charles G. Dawes to smash the Hiram Johnson jeremiad.

THE JAIL.

Sir: The following is dedicated to the practical and up-to-date custom of putting hardened criminals with "first-timers" in the same section—this in our own modern and fireproof city jail. Do you care to publish it?

"WHAT do you see if you visit a jail? Sneak thieves and bold thieves and murderers pale. What do you see if you peek thru the gate? Black men and white men awaiting their fate. What do you see if you visit a zoo? The soft-footed tiger—the sleek jaguar, too. What do you see if you peek thru the bars? Massive iron chains that make hideous scars. What thoughts do men have as they pace the hard floor? Or huddle in corners—do they plot but the more?

What wonder the beasts as they stiffen or bend? Do they dream of their freedom now at an end? But stay—in the zoo—do they cage in the pen. A fox with a goat or a lion with a wren? Does the snake try to teach the camel to staid The various tricks of his own little trade?"

Where graybeard mirth and smiling toil re-quir'd, Where village statesmen talk'd with looks profound, And news that older than their ale went round. Imagination fondly stoops to trace The parlour splendours of that festive place; The whitewash'd wall, the nicely sanded floor, The varnish'd clock that tick'd behind the door; The chest contriv'd a double debt to pay, A bed by night, a chest of drawers by day; The pictures placed for ornament and use, The twelve good rules, the royal game of goose; The hearth, except when winter chill'd the day, With aspen boughs, and flowers, and fennel gay.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

WRITING FOR NEWSPAPERS.

THE Joseph Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University has opened for business. Many of its students will attend with the idea of learning how to write, so that people will read what they have written. To these students we may offer one piece of advice. Make your writing personal, by thinking first of your reader, only secondarily of yourself. A man (or a woman) reads newspapers in the hope of finding therein something that interests him, not something that might conceivably be of general interest. An article on "British Financial Propositions" might have general interest; an article on "How England Proposes to Keep Your Taxes High" would have personal interest. One might be read; the other would be. And as a newspaper writer begins his article, so he should go on. The concrete statement, which puts ideas in terms of the knowledge most people possess, will interest them; the general statement will not. One good illustration is worth a paragraph of abstract explanation; just as a triangular scar on the left eyebrow identifies a man more accurately, because it is more personal, than a long list of such terms as medium height, light hair, blue eyes, narrow shoulders, high forehead, and so forth. An idea cannot be made clear except by an act of partnership, and your partner is your reader. Unless you take him into consideration, you will seldom get anywhere with what you write.

POST-WAR GERMANY.

FROM the Minneapolis Journal. OLE HANSON'S picture of the German people at work is a vivid one. What Mr. Hanson sets forth supports President Wilson's celebrated distinction between the German people and the German Government. The economic virtues of the Germans are undoubted. And the contributions of the higher German intellect to the world in this age of science are invaluable. It is one of those inexplicable ironies of life that this people of such magnificent intelligence and such high average capacity as an average American, a political genius that it could be led around by the nose by its autocratic rulers. The German people, if Mr. Hanson sees them clearly, are not indulging in passion and plotting revenge, but are working and trusting to their power of production. Sympathizers with them here might do well to accept the suggestion and cease indulging in dreams of an impossible vengeance. The industrious German people, if they will stick to the way of sound sense and Christian virtue, are so competent and reliable that they can reach a high level of legitimate attainment.

WOMEN HEADS OF FAMILIES.

FROM the Brooklyn Eagle. THE fact that 144,000 women filed State income tax returns, outside of those whose incomes were covered by a joint return, creates no surprise at all. In this State woman is just as free to acquire and manage property as man is; and there is much food for reflection in the announcement that more than 80,000 women, all single, filled in blanks as heads of families with dependents whom they were supporting. And in a large number of cases the salaries they were earning were substantial enough to justify the assumption of such obligations for the support of relatives. Probably the average or typical woman is proud of earning a salary, proud of being the head of a family in the income tax sense; proud of her own loyalty to the family she holds together. The feeling that she is "an unsophisticated blessing" to adopt the old euphemism for a spinster, takes this form. Efficiency and attentive industry utterly banish the feeling that some how the world has lacked appreciation of her possibilities. Is this development of our complex civilization a good one or a bad one? We do not know. But that it is not distinctively American and that everywhere it was inevitable may be averred without fear of serious contradiction.

New York Authority on Interior Decorations Gives Advice to St. Louisans Who Would "Fix Up" Their Homes.

By Marguerite Martyn.

THE interior of your home should express your income. It should express yourself, your friends, your type of entertainment, your taste, your personality, your authority on interior decoration, of New York, who has been in St. Louis for many years.

However little or however much you have to spend, be sure you express your personality, your taste, your authority on interior decoration, of New York, who has been in St. Louis for many years.

A commission was given me, she went on to relate, by a young couple who were planning to buy a small apartment. The bride was a daughter of wealthy parents, but they, very wisely, were insisting that she should live upon the income of her young husband, just starting in business, was able to provide. I was allowed $1500 for the furnishings of these rooms.

I knew my patron to be the smart, new type of modern young woman. Her rooms must express that, same degree of style.

"Now," she continued, "I always tell what I call a stone foundation, then a superstructure. By the stone foundation I mean articles of furniture that will be good for a lifetime. By the superstructure, I mean things as wear out and must be replaced. In this case I put the bulk of the money to be spent upon the living room into a great, deep, upholstered sofa and two chairs. The pieces will be good enough to take to more pretentious quarters later on. If the sentiment that often attaches to articles 'we began housekeeping with' happens to be strong, they will be worthy of that sentiment, as the best of the old sofa and chairs of our grandparents are worthy today.

USLINS covers on these pieces were just as smart as expensive upholstery in this room.

"Our economizing was done in curtains and carpets, those things which would have to be replaced in two or three years, anyway. Not enough good rugs to cover the floors could have been obtained within the allowance, so carpeting was used, but such as could be ripped up and used in halls in another house. Glazed chintzes were inexpensive in proportion to the style they gave to the windows. These were drawn over simple muslin casement cloths. "The same curtains were used throughout the apartment. There is a certain idea of expression about a home that compares with window draperies, yet how rarely people express themselves sincerely through the medium of curtains," she observed. "You will see handsome lace curtains at lower front windows and curtains gradually growing toward the attic. My theory is that if you cannot have hand-drawn curtains at all your windows then select the style you can afford for the attic and use the same style throughout the house. A mistake as unbecoming to people outside as the blank, staring window blind.

"A WOMAN in St. Louis," she added, "actually seemed puzzled when I asked her to substitute draw curtains for window shades. Window shades, I regard, as relics of an antiquity no more to be lamented or restored than the works that used to decorate the mantel shelf."

"Now, having but a limited amount to spend, and our young couple to employ the services of a professional decorator," Miss Killam was asked.

"They could not afford not to employ one," she replied. "The decorator's function is to save the client's money, by getting values he would not be able to get for himself. "Each client has plans of her own," remarked Miss Killam. "There are those with whose taste I can never accord. However, some that may be regarded as impossible I get the most joy out of as a real test of skill. Take the dear old couple who came to me saying, 'But don't mind us, it isn't that, but the kind of house we began with is good enough for us now. We need something larger and suitable to our increased family and means. But we were happiest in those early days and what was good enough for us then is good enough now.' Asked what in particular their first home remained, they said, 'We had a red living room and a blue living room,' and they recalled various articles of furniture."

"Why, of course," said I. "Nobody has a right to take away from you these things which you have become attached to. They are like your children." I gave them a red dining room, but it was a beautiful red dining room in soft mulberry reds, and I placed their furniture and decorations that the whole effect was not a discredit to myself, and they find their home more livable and lovely than their old house, though they may not be able to explain why."

SHE mentioned other difficult cases. The wife of a newly-rich old man who made the disheartening announcement that if she didn't like her decorations after they were completed, she was in position to just chuck them out and order others.

"This was a woman who loved color, starting, resounding, theatrical colors. I gave her these effects, including rich brocades, some startling contrasts and studied accents.

and her house is stunning. I am proud to show it to my most critical contemporaries. And her owner hasn't chucked it all out yet. Another subject demanding expression in her surroundings was an enormously stout woman. "I think I never had seen anyone who gave such an impression of heaviness. How to make her seem and feel cooler, thinner, lighter, was my problem. I removed every vestige of heavy furniture and draperies, employed the lightest, most delicate colors, the thinnest fabrics, the coolest effects that could be obtained in furniture, draperies and color schemes. She likes her rooms tremendously and with all the stiffness and stiffness of her surroundings removed, she says she feels, and certainly she looks, less stout."

It having come out that Wilder was a fair pianist, he played the girl's accompaniments, but while Cameron openly called taking an unfair advantage."

At the end of a fortnight Cameron was able to hobble about with a stick, and he and Wilder held consultations concerning the danger of outstaying one's welcome. But Mrs. Cameron would not hear of their going—unless they were tired of the place.

"Your holiday has still 10 days to run," she said. "You are saving a young girl from having a dull time and making an old woman friends with life again."

A few evenings later, in the drawing room, she produced an old autograph book. A glance through would have disclosed many highly distinguished names. She handed it to Cameron, who presently entered his signature.

"Donald!" she read aloud; "and a very good name! It is high time I knew what your mother's call you. Now, Mr. Wilder, if you please!" He wrote and returned the book. "John Murray Wilder," she read, and he felt a little stiff. She closed the book and laid it aside. "My friend," said Cameron, "has been too modest to mention his Scottish blood."

"Yes, yes, Murray is Scottish, but not Highland. If you will give me your arm, Mr. Cameron, I should like to show you something in the other room."

As the door closed the dismayed Wilder looked at Marjorie. "I'm so sorry," she said. "If only I had known. Perhaps I ought to have let you read the books after all."

"But what is wrong, Miss Cameron?" "I suppose I must tell you," she said reluctantly. "If there is one name that my grandmother hates it is John Murray. I don't remember hearing her utter it till tonight."

"Of course you will not take it personally," she returned, with a faint smile. "John Murray of Broughton was the Prince's secretary, and I think he was faithful to him that he preferred living a dog's life to dying a man's death."

"Forgive me, Mr. Wilder. It is a thousand to one against his being an ancestor of yours; and even if he were—"

"She paused. "Try to be wary with my grandmother. It was probably a shock to her."

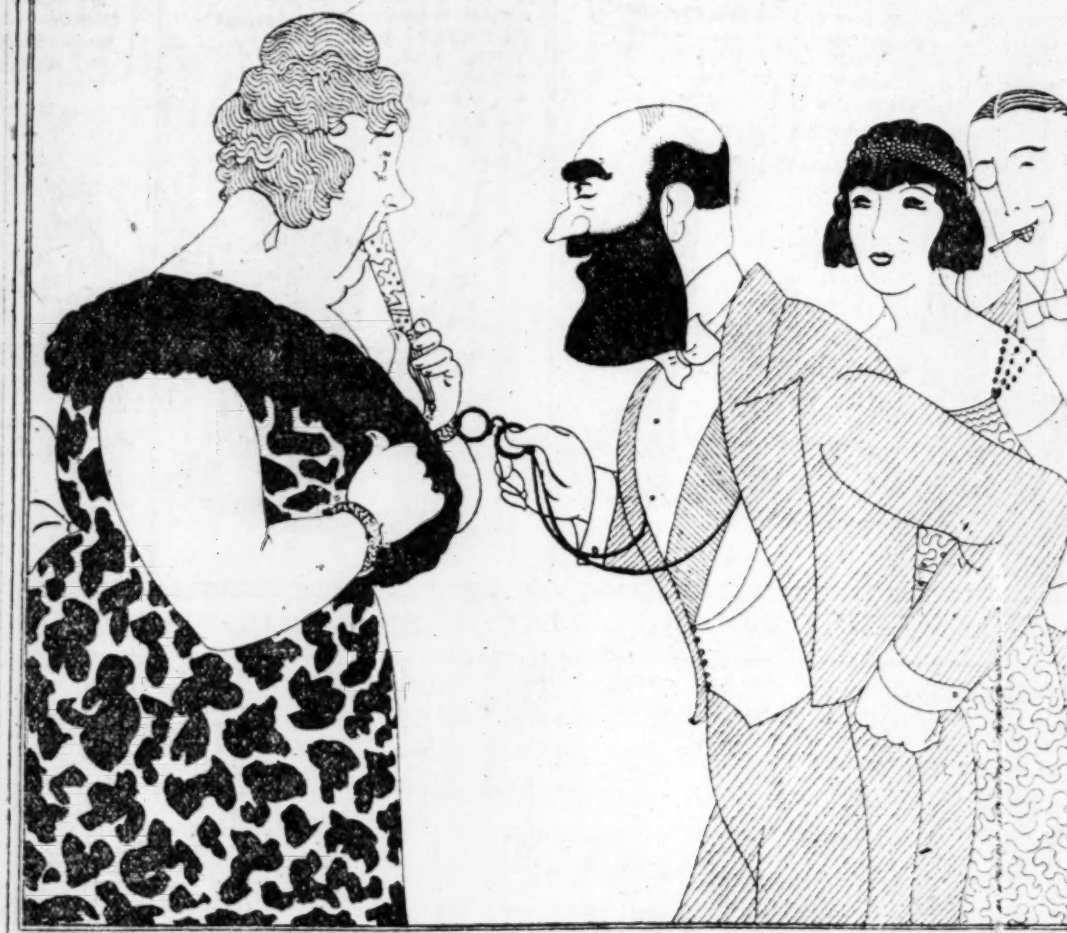

"Yes, I can understand that," said Wilder, endeavoring to hide his hurt. "It must have been a shock to discover that she had been entertaining a person of so sinister a name. But I can't know who my grandmother was. He broke off. 'Tell me what I ought to do.'"

"Why nothing. My grandmother will soon see that she has been unreasonable. Don't expect her to beg your pardon, but just try to forget, as I am sure, she will forget."

There was silence till Wilder said: "As a matter of fact, I've been bothering about my name. The day after we came here I wrote to an aunt who used to concern herself about our family trees. She could think of nothing for I asked her to cable the names of the distinguished members of our family in the year 1745. You see—with a rueful laugh

The Woman Who Has Studied French for Ten Years, the First Time She Meets a Real Frenchman.

"I hoped we might have had some connection with Prince Charlie. But now?"

"Why despair?" she asked. "There was another Murray—Sir George—who was Charles' leading General, and did splendidly, though he is not a hero of my grandmother's. But there were hundreds of Murrays in Scotland."

Mrs. Cameron returned with her favored guest. "I have received a great honor," Cameron solemnly announced. "I have been permitted to sit in Prince Charles' chair."

"An honor given to me?" remarked Marjorie, a little coldly. Wilder fancied. "What about a game of bridge?"

The old lady shook her head. She felt tired and would prefer to rest. The evening passed less blithely than its predecessors. Cameron alone appeared free from constraint. It was rather too evident that the hostess was striving hard to be kind to Wilder, and he felt humiliated, accordingly, Marjorie sang indifferently and briefly, with her grandmother's aid, retired early.

As she was helping the old lady to bed she said gently: "Granny, what's in a name?" "Everything!" I'm sorry for that young man, but—"

"Do you know, dear," Marjorie interrupted, "I'm beginning to think there's nothing in a name—nothing at all."

"What? Nothing in your own name, and mine? Was ever a Cameron a traitor?"

"I wonder," said Marjorie, but it was to herself and she apologized and abandoned the subject, hoping her indiscretion might not spoil her grandmother's rest. Nor did Mrs. Cameron seem wishful to be disturbed by the matter further.

Downstairs Wilder expressed his intention of going for a walk. "Don't wait up for me. The door is never locked, you know."

Even as the thought passed through his mind, a man came round the bend of the road. It was still light enough for recognition.

"It is you, Mr. Wilder! Well, well!" said Ronald. "I was at the village, and they gave me a wire for you. He pleased to excuse the delay, but they are not hurrying themselves at the postoffice when they think the message is not important. And now I will be getting home to put in the night."

"Don't wait up for me, Ronald."

"Well, well, it is a fine evening, and I mind when I, a young man, would be lying on the heather till the dawn."

"Sleeping?"

"No, sir; just half thinking and half dreaming of love and the great things I would be doing some day."

With a kindly laugh Ronald went his way.

Wilder read the message.

"Only distinguished John Murray Broughton, secretary young pretender."

"My luck, I suppose," sighed Wilder, for love clutches at straws.

It was long after midnight when he returned to the house. He opened the door quietly, stepped cautiously into a subdued light, and saw Marjorie.

Cameron looked at him. "Anything the matter, old man?"

"Thanks, nothing. Good-night." "Hold on a moment," the other room Mrs. Cameron was asking things about you—O, in the kitchen; and I assure you I gave you a pretty good character."

As she was helping the old lady to bed she said gently: "Granny, what's in a name?" "Everything!" I'm sorry for that young man, but—"

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

By James J. Montague.

A QUANDARY.

"Save up your pennies," said the ad.
"The business situation
is rapidly becoming bad.
And thrift must save the nation."
And so we rationed our cigars
And other costly follies.
Refrained from buying motor cars
And rode to work on trolleys.
The ridicule of friends we braved
By wearing rubber collars,
And in a little while we saved
Five hundred thousand dollars.

Another ad gave this advice:
"Spend Money! Do Not Hoard It!
Thrift Costs Us All Too High a Price!
The country can't afford it!"
So rather than have business crash
To utter ruination,
We saw that all our hoarded cash
Was put in circulation.
On luxuries our coin we blew
Here, there and over yonder,
Till not a solitary son
Was left to us to squander.

And now another ad makes known
The shortage of production
And bawls the fact that thrift alone
Can save us from destruction.
To save our cash in large amounts,
Its serious advice is
For only men with bank accounts
Can pass the coming crisis.
But as for us, too well, alas,
The second ad we trusted,
The coming crisis we can't pass
For we're already busted.
